the BorderLands Network

by Saskia Kraft van Ermel
President - The Borderlands Network

From its inception, The Borderlands Network or TBLN, was created as a venue for the paranormal programming world. No other network has programming channels whether on cable, satellite or broadband exclusively dedicated to that of the paranormal. Jose believed a network was necessary to show the extensive variety of paranormal subjects. With all the great filmmakers, radio talk shows, old and new films, lectures, etc., TBLN is the vehicle to show the world what would otherwise be a more difficult task for the viewers to have access to. And so, an idea was born.

When I first met Jose, I was looking for a web master. Lo and behold, I found Jose Escamilla. As I found out he is not only a man of many talents, he is also a great human being. We became very good friends and would spend a great deal of time talking about a lotof things. When The Borderlands Network was broughtup, something in the back of our minds knew it was time! There couldn't be a better time for the network. But how do we do this? Where do we start? How much money do we need? Should we find investors?

TBLN was dormant for five years because raising money for a television network was like finding a needle in a haystack. Yet on a daily basis, the sheer will and determination to make it work kept us busy trying. As we were struggling to find ways to make it happen, it was happening.

The Borderlands Network is honored to be the first All Paranormal Network. The day has come for viewers to get the diversity of all paranormal films at the touch of a button.

We kept plugging along everyday. Little by little we kept chipping away hoping to make that one grain of sand into a beach. We would brainstorm all the time.

Let's make a killer web site, we thought. People need to be as excited as we are when they enter. Let's give them everything they want to see and more! We want to be interactive with the viewers and offer contests, trading cards for members, special events and a lot, lot more. We want them to be involved and part of the TBLN family. The viewers should have access to a network that has quality films, cool freebies, live telecasts and products no one else has.

And while we were brainstorming everyday, we were still scouring for money to help us get through each day. It's not easy getting a network launched with all the bells and whistles. We want to give our audience the best of the best. Everyday was a roller coaster ride but we were determined to make it happen.

As irony would have it, things just fell into place.

As we all know, any film that is not properly protected by encoding and encryption may soon become the "You Tube" special of the day. Jose's film "UFO...THE GREATEST STORY EVER DENIED" fell victim to being the massive freebie of the month. In one website alone, it was downloaded over 300,000 times. He invested two years of his life making that film. It was nothing short of hard work and sweat with his passion for film making, only to give it away. Enter, Vividas.

TBLN in partnership with Vividas and their proprietary technology of encoding and encrypting will be able to present the finest films protected from piracy. Broadband streaming has reached a new level and we're proud to be apart of it.

We also have a great crew at TBLN. Randy Haragan (Publisher of this magazine and owner of theUFOstore.com) is the VP of Acquisitions and Programming. As far as we're concerned, he is the only person to fill that position. Not only is he more than qualified, his expertise in so many areas is a great asset to TBLN, and he's just a great guy! Ken Salottolo is our Promotional Consultant for TBLN sponsorships. He brings to the table years of experience in promotions, advertising and marketing. Jose and Ken go back a long time and it is a pleasure to have him on board.

Helen Staats is our VP of Marketing, Europe. Based in The Netherlands, Helen has extensive background in the European business market and we are all very excited she has joined TBLN.

The Borderlands Network is honored to be the first All Paranormal Network. The day has come for viewers to get the diversity of all paranormal films at the touch of a button. We look forward to a very exciting future with all of you who have waited so long for the void to be filled.

Thank you for letting us into your home.

If Ruins Of An Ancient Civilization Are Discovered On Mars, Will You Lose Your Religion?

by Thomas Horn

According to polls, a majority of people could accept a genuine ET reality without losing faith in God.

NASA's recently released ultra high resolution pictures of the "face on Mars" reveal details as small as a few inches across including what some believe to be girders, windows and walls from ancient structures. Richard Hoagland and his Enterprise Team believe this is the smoking gun. "The debate is over," he says. "I no longer need to prove that these are ruins, my critics need to prove that they are not."

A few years ago the movie "Mission to Mars" sent NASA Commander Luke Graham (Don Cheadle) with a crew of four astronauts to the red planet. While exploring strange geological formations on the Martian landscape, the truth about the Face on Mars and the origin of mankind was discovered.

At the time, director Brian De Palma admitted, "Mission to Mars is set in 2020 because that's the date the experts predict we should have a manned landing on Mars."

The film insinuated that, when we do set foot on Mars, the discovery of past alien presence could be made near the Sphinx-like "face" and pyramidal shapes photographed by the Viking Mars probe.

Benevolent Creator Astronauts Theory (ET=God)

A staple doctrine among many ufologists is that such a discovery would lead to the conclusion that the origin of myth as well as the creation of man was the direct result of intelligent extraterrestrial activity, or benevolent creator astronauts.

In the introduction to his bestselling book, CHARIOTS OF THE GODS?, Erich von Daniken, who, it might be argued, is one of the fathers of modern ufology, said:

"I claim that our forefathers received visits from the universe in the remote past, even though I do not yet know who these extra-terrestrial intelligences were or from which planet they came. I nevertheless proclaim that these "strangers" annihilated part of mankind existing at the time and produced a new, perhaps the first, homo sapiens."

As was illustrated in the Hollywood films Contact and Close Encounters Of The Third Kind, Erich von Daniken's hypothesis took America by storm in the 1960's with the proposition that mankind was possibly the offspring of an ancient, even ongoing, extraterrestrial experiment.

Ufologists like Daniken assert that the Sphinx, the Pyramids and myths of ancient cultures are potential evidence of an encounter with these other-worldly beings. They claim ancient men would have considered space travelers as gods and would have recorded their arrival, their experiments, and their departure, in hieroglyphs, megaliths, and stone tablets as a "supernatural" encounter between gods and men.

Mr. Daniken continues:

"While [the] spaceship disappears again into the mists of the universe our friends will talk about the miracle—"The gods were here!"....they will make a record of what happened: uncanny, weird, miraculous. Then their texts will relate—and drawings will show—that gods in golden clothes were there in a flying boat that landed with a tremendous din. They will write about chariots which the gods drove over land and sea, and of terrifying weapons that were like lightning, and they will recount that the gods promised to return. They will hammer and chisel in the rock pictures of what they had seen:"

Von Daniken also claims that the odd appearance of some of the gods as depicted in various hieroglyphs (human-like creatures with falcon heads; lions with heads of bulls, etc) could be viewed as evidence that "aliens" conducted experiments of cloning and cross-mutating ancient people and animals.

Daniken's hypothesis is accepted by some as an alternative to the traditional account of creation. It's uncertain how many people believe the Daniken (and Sitchen) theory, but approximately 70% of Americans believe in the possibility of extraterrestrial life. Some, like the 39 members of the Heaven's Gate cult that committed suicide in Rancho Santa Fe, California and believed they were being summoned by a UFO trailing the Hale-Bopp Comet, take it a step further. They merge ufology and religious cosmology to produce hybrids of conventional religion and/or esoteric mysticism. Of course the remaining 30% minority reject the entire notion as ridiculous.

Malevolent Non-Creator-Astronauts Theory (ET=Satan)

One of the more troubling aspects of the benevolent creator-astronaut view is the related "abduction" scenario associated with certain types of aliens—the taking of a person against their will, often followed by intrusive probes, genetic tinkering, embryo farming and other experimental processes. The abduction by shadowy forces for reasons unknown is viewed by most experiencers and researchers as impersonal, malevolent, demonic.

Associate professor of psychology Elizabeth L. Hillstrom points out in her book, Testing the Spirits, that a growing number of academics also associate UFOnauts—whoever, or whatever, they are—with historical "demons".

She writes:

"From a Christian perspective, Vallee's explanation of UFOs is the most striking because of its parallels with demonic activity. UFO investigators have noticed these similarities. Vallee himself, drawing from extrabiblical literature on demonic activities, establishes a number of parallels between UFOnauts and demons....Pierre Guerin, a UFO researcher and a scientist associated with the French National Council for Scientific Research, is not so cautious: "The modern UFOnauts and the demons of past days are probably identical." Veteran researcher John Keel, who wrote UFOs: Operation Trojan Horse and other books on the subject, comes to the same conclusion: "The UFO manifestations seem to be, by and large, merely minor variations of the age-old demonological phenomenon."

Yet if a portion of "flying saucer" activity is in the biblical sense demonic, what nefarious purpose would be served by the stealthy nature of UFO phenomena?

According to some, the answer is diabolical. UFO-ism, they say, is aimed at preparing the earth for an extraterrestrial "return of the creator gods." To put it bluntly, some believe we are being prepared for the collapse of man's dominant religions. This will happen in two ways:

First, alien religion—as reported in hundreds of abduction cases—is one of evolutionary humans "on the verge of extraordinary telepathic and technological emergence" in which transhumanism will pave the way for harmonic and spiritual convergence to the community of space brothers.

Second, from a technological standpoint, UFO sightings challenge the claim of human superiority and dispute our unique role in the universe. We are made to feel shallow, undeveloped, unenlightened if we consider rejecting the new universal religion.

ETs bearing this message often point out that "they" will be reappearing at any moment to assist us in this—our next big evolutionary, spiritual, and technological step forward.

Supported By Historical and Religious Texts

Claims of extraterrestrials visiting the earth in ancient times and interacting with men is referenced throughout ancient history, including sacred texts. As illustrated in the two views above, ufologists differ in the definition of who these creatures were and what they were doing. For instance, both Daniken and Sitchen refer to the figures in the Bible here (Interlinear Hebrew):

"The benei Elohim saw the daughters of Adam, that they were fit extensions. And they took wives for themselves from all those that they chose...The Nephelim were in the earth in those days, and even afterwards when the benei Elohim came in to the daughters of Adam, and they bore to them—they were Powerful Ones which existed from ancient times, the men of name. (Gen. 6:2,4)"

We are told these benei Elohim were "extraterrestrial" creatures known elsewhere as "watchers," "sons of God," and "rephiam." These visited the earth during antiquity and used the daughters of Adam as "fit extensions" or instruments through which they extended themselves into the physical world. They represented themselves as "gods," and their offspring, the Nephilim ("fallen ones"), made war with the Hebrews.

Tom Horn discusses passive radar and the "hunt" for UFOs with Peter Davenport, Director of the National UFO Reporting Center

Yet some think these beings could be planning something now, an "alien invasion" or discovery designed to deceive the human race. We are entering the 'end times', the theory goes, where "...fearful sights and great signs...from heaven" (Lk 21:11) will be seen.

2 Thessalonians 2:8-12 is often added to this theory:

"And then shall that Wicked [one] be revealed....whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders....And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: That they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

ET=Neither God Or Satan

The message is: Beware if world authorities begin "disclosure" by pointing to ancient mysteries, megaliths, pyramids, the Face on Mars, UFOs or anything else as proof of an ancient visitation of planet earth by creator ETs. Deception, we are told, will follow. We will be instructed to believe that ancient astronauts—not God—created the human race, and a great "falling away" of the earth's major religions will follow.

Others argue that to depict ET as either godly or satanic is to trivialize the debate; that in a sense ET is neither... and both! Just as "good" and "bad" angels exist or "good" and "bad" people exist, ET comes in all personality types, races, and temperaments. The Grays, who are most usually associated with abduction, might be perceived as evil (or at a minimum impersonal), while other aliens are good guys.

"Don't buy that for a second," we hear the conservative ufologist shout. "Satan comes as an angel of light!"

Yet I digress.

If evidence of ancient "civilizations" or UFOs are discovered elsewhere in the galaxy, will YOU lose YOUR religion?

From Here to Andromeda opens with the possibility that humanity may not survive due to Global Warming, an ensuing Ice Age or Mass Extinction. Al Gore's movie, An Inconvenient Truth, has swept the world with the realization that Global Warming may destroy our civilization. The question is why doesn't humanity have the will to live with Sustainable technologies like Solar, Wind, and Helium-3 Fusion to beat Global Warming? Why are the oil companies holding us hostage? Why hasn't all of humanity awakened and taken measures to ensure our survival?

GUEST COMMENTARY

William B. Stoecker
author of The Atlantis Conspiracy, www.hiddenmysteries.com

The Global Warming Lie

Most of us have by now wised up to the fact that the controlled elite media around the world routinely lie or withold important information from the public about such matters as the JFK murder, 9/11, or the London subway bombing. Most of us also know that the standard tactic for the big lie is to tell it loudly and often and publish nothing that contradicts it. And what have the elites been shouting at us over and over and over for the past few years? They have been warning us about the deadly peril of global warming caused by our consumption of fossil fuels, which put carbon dioxide, a known greenhouse gas, into the atmosphere. This, they claim, will warm the earth so that ice sheets will melt and we will all be flooded, says Chicken Little, by the rising seas. Since that, apparently, did not frighten people enough, they have also recently been warning us that warmer weather could cause a sudden ice age by upsetting ocean currents. They have shown detailed, computer generated maps of the future climate (this from people who cannot even predict tomorrow's weather in your home town), showing, among other things, desertification. This works because most people associate deserts with heat and fail to realize that a warmer Earth means more evaporation from the seas, hence more clouds, hence more preciptation, not less.

Their solutions to this imagined danger include proposals for a UN tax on fossil fuel consumption that would lower living standards and make the New World Order even more powerful, along with a host of regulations that would only apply to the developed countries, where the citizens still have some semblance of freedom and prosperity. The rules would not apply to, for example, China and India, where coal could continue to be burned without limit. So how would that limit CO2 buildup? They are a little hazy on the details.

They give us varying figures on the likely percentage of CO2 increase over the coming decades, and the average person, numerically challenged, can imagine that our atmosphere is, say, ten percent CO2 and a (for example) five percent increase would bring the total to fifteen percent. Here we see the value of dumbing down the schools over the last few decades. It is not ten percent CO2, and that is not the way to compute percentages. As well as can be measured, the atmosphere at present is .03 percent CO2, or three percent of one percent, or only three parts in every ten thousand. Even if it were to increase by ten percent, that would only be ten percent of three percent of one percent, or three parts in every hundred thousand. On the face of it, it seems wildly improbable that such minute increases could cause significant climatic change. In fact, in a vast, dynamic system like Earth's atmosphere, where air and moisture are circulating and CO2 varies from one area to another and from one day to the next, and can be dissolved in or released from bodies of water, scientists cannot even measure such small changes with any certainty. In other words, they do not even know for sure that the CO2 content is increasing at all. Furthermore, the media only tell us of those scientists who, knowing where their next check is coming from and what the results expected of them are, parrot the paety line. In fact, a great many climatologists, seldom quoted, have stated that global warming is not proven at all.

Not only can we not measure CO2 with any certainty; so vast and dynamic is our atmosphere, and so complex the interactions between it and those vast heat reservoirs, the oceans, that we cannot even be certain that the temperature is increasing.

We are encouraged to forget that many of the prophets of global warming were, as recently as the nineteen seventies, warning us about global cooling and an imminent ice age. The sky, it seems, is always falling; it just falls in different directions. Many of these same people (and, of course, the elite media) also predicted that a nuclear war would cause vast firestorms, and the resultant smoke would block the Sun's rays and bring about a nuclear winter. But to predict that, they had to ignore the inevitable CO2 released by those fires; now they do the exact opposite and focus on the CO2 while ignoring the light-blocking smoke from car exhausts and coal-burning power plants.

Furthermore, a temperature increase, if it did happen, would, to some extent, be self limiting. More evaporation and more clouds mean more water vapor, which is also a greenhouse gas, but also more reflection of sunlight away from Earth by the clouds, and the net effect of these two opposites tends to be a slight cooling. Not only that, but extra CO2 stimulates plant growth, since plants metabolize CO2 during photosynthesis, and there will also be more and faster plant growth worldwide because of the longer growing seasons in a warmer world, and more vegetation in desert and semi-arid regions, now receiving more rain. This increased vegetation will take CO2 out of the atmosphere, so that the CO2 increase also would be, to some extent, self limiting. Most people would argue that a warmer, wetter world with more vegetation would be, overall, a good thing, both for natural eco systems and for humanity.But environmental extremists seem to be opposed to any change whatever, ignoring the fact that, over millions of years, Earth's climate has always changed, and will continue to do so, regardless of human activities.

And we are dependent on fossil fuels due to these same extremists. The people now warning us about global warming are, for the most part, the same ones who have long opposed all nuclear power. They cite the disaster at Chernobyl, conveniently forgetting that this was an inherently bad design, never used in the West, and that the plant was poorly maintained, and that the meltdown, while serious, failed to produce the kind of global catastrophe they had always predicted. They cite the leakage at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania in the US, but fail to mention that no one died (and there was never a later increase in cancer or leukemia in the area or downwind) , or that the design flaw in that reactor was identified and corrected in all US reactors. They fail to mention the exemplary safety record of French reactors, or the fact that inherently safe designs now exist. They focus on the waste storage issue, but, in the US at least, this is largely a problem of their own creation, as their court actions have prevented removal of waste to relatively safe sites deep underground in arid regions. These same environmentalists have opposed building new hydroelectric power plants and even called for demolition of existing dams. When wind generated electricity seemed uneconomical and impractical they supported it, but once improved technologies, economies of scale, and rising fossil fuel prices made it competetive, they began opposing it, citing the danger that a few birds might fly into the blades. There are any number of ways of reducing bird strikes, but environmental extremists and their masters are not in the business of offering solutions, but, rather, of creating problems. And now, having helped to make us overly dependent on fossil fuels, they want to take that away from us as well. If their secret goal was actually to impoverish, control, and even kill most of humanity, they would not behave any differently.

And they ignore the fact, previously mentioned, that climate has always changed. Ice ages and periods of warming far beyond anything in modern times have come and gone without any human assistance. In the truly remote past, many scientists believe that there was at least one episode of global warming so extreme that most of the life on the planet was wiped out, and at least one ice age that reached all the way to the equator. The last ice age ended perhaps eleven thousand years ago, but then the Earth continued to warm, and between five and ten thousand years ago it was warmer than in any time in recorded history. Around seven to eight thousand years ago, the world was so warm and wet that the Sahara and other deserts were grasslands and even forests, with no sign of any fossil fuel consumption anywhere, and no catastrophic sea level rise. Between three thousand and twenty five hundred years ago the Earth became cooler and dryer, probably due to a massive volcanic eruption, and this may have brought about the end of Egypt's Old Kingdom. The climate then improved, but another period of cold and drought began suddenly in 536 A.D., probably also caused by a volcano, and this certainly contributed to the fall of Rome, and may have stimulated barbarian migrations, which mostly went from cold or dry regions to warmer or wetter ones.From about 1100 to 1300 A.D. the Earth enjoyed the Medieval Warm Period, and Europe climbed out of the Dark Ages, only to be plunged into poverty and plague (there had also been an outbreak after 536) by the Little Ice Age. There is no evidence that human activity caused any of this.

But, interestingly enough, solar activity did. At least part of the Little Ice Age, from about 1650 to 1700, coincided with what is called the Maunder Minimum, when sunspot activity was very low (observations had not been possible prior to this). Sunspots normally follow an eleven year cycle, and when the Sun is brighter and hotter there are more sunspots. The reasons for this are unknown, nor do we understand why, at times, this cycle is disrupted by major changes in the Sun's energy output, but it should surprise no one that there is a rough correlation, with a slight delay, between increased solar activity, and incvreased temperatures here on Earth. In fact, at present, solar activity is much higher than it has been during most of the last four hundred years. Perhaps that, rather than our fossil fuel consumption, accounts for the recent higher temperatures we may (or may not) be experiencing.

So what does all of this mean? Should we go to the opposite extreme and burn fossil fuels with abandon, or dam every river on Earth for hydro power? Actually, there are many other alternatives. There are many other reasons while fossil fuels are not the best option. We can develop nuclear and wind energy, and research so-called free or virtual energy. But we cannot, and must not, allow the elites and their lackeys to panic us into submission to their will.

Was There an Ancient Civilization on Mars?

By: David E. Twichell

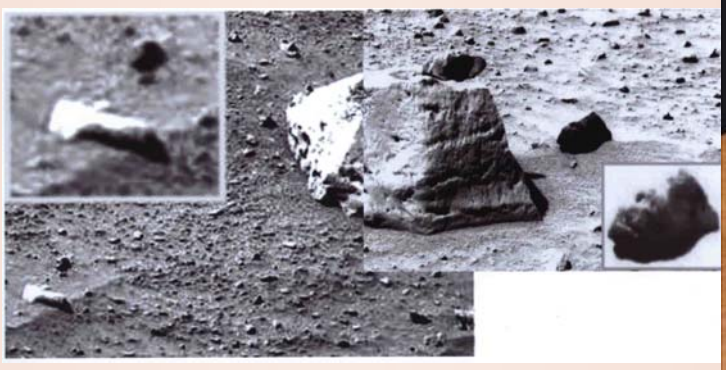
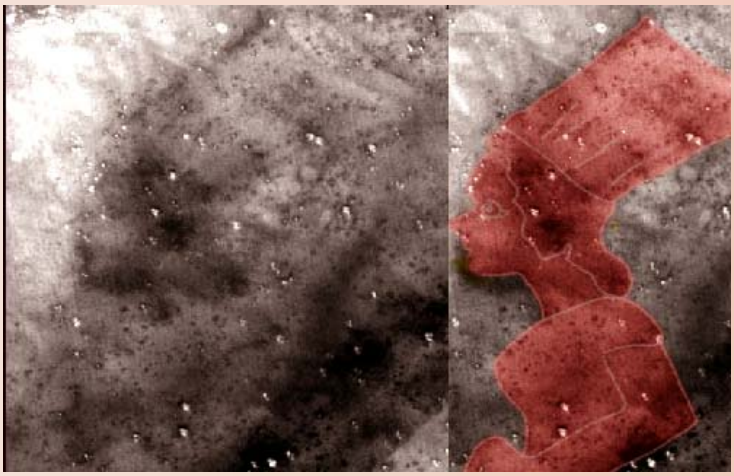
The rock formations and landscape found on the surface of the planet Mars may well be nothing more sinister than a trick of light and shadow. Here on Earth, we are able to discern faces or skull-like features in rock formations as a random, natural consequence, especially when viewed from a distance. Likewise, one may lie out on the lawn on a summer afternoon and find countless familiar images in passing clouds that soon morph into some other familiar object.

However, these images taken by the Rover on Mars' surface, when examined in total, seem to suggest a pattern that is not found in nature. Some of them seem to suggest the handiwork of an intelligent race of beings, similar to our own, that were either cut short in their natural evolutionary progress or were forced underground by the bombardment of meteorites, a dwindling atmosphere, the evaporation of it's water supply or countless other reasons.

After viewing these pictures from Mars, you decide.



1. This image is a composite of two separate pictures taken at the same location. In the center is a large rock with a small rock on top of it. Did this smaller rock land on the larger one as the result of debris from a landing meteorite, or was it placed there? To the right of the large rock is an object that looks suspiciously like a sculpture of a man's head. Note the enlarged insert. (Below is the same shot with the insert enlarged and colorized.) To the left of the large rock is an object that looks suspiciously like a primitive tool – perhaps a chisel for the purpose of rock carving. Could this area be the abandon workshop of some ancient sculpture?



2. Here is an impression in the Martian soil of, what appears to be, the profile of a woman with shoulder length hair wearing a tall headdress. To the right of this image the area has been isolated, computer enhanced and colorized. The detail provided by this view makes it apparent that such a detailed image of an identifiable humanoid figure would be impossible to have randomly taken shape naturally. (Note: The size of the area of this image is unknown.)

3. This startling image is an area in which NASA scientists have obviously taken great interest. The area is reminiscent of ancient cities or ceremonial plats that have been discovered or unearthed on our own planet. Buried beneath a coat of Martian dust, wide steps or plateaus uniformly lead down to an area in the center of the picture where there are two "cave-like" entrances. These steps are even more apparent at the top, just left of center. These steps appear to lead up to two pyramid-shaped structures. The fact that Martian dust has settled over this and other areas of the planet proves that there is (or once was) a life-sustaining atmosphere – something that mainstream science has long theorized Mars was devoid of. Dust and rock particles would not be able to settle back down to the planet's surface in the absence of an atmosphere.

BACKBONE

A - Normal image
B - 200% enlargement

Features of a spine bone are clearly visible. Need I say more? NASA thought this was interesting enough to take pictures of.

4. Here is what closely resembles the fossilized backbone of some living creature. Once again, these could be nothing more than randomly spaced rocks that form something similar to a recognizable object. However, upon close inspection, one would be hard pressed to find such a rock formation that has been naturally formed through randomization.

5. This picture shows a three-sided pyramid. The front of the pyramid may have been chiseled out to represent a face. The probable explanation is that it has either been broken off or eroded away. Nonetheless, the contour of the rock would suggest a perfect pyramid shape. Furthermore, many like-shaped rocks have appeared in other pictures taken by the Rover.

6. This image shows a large rock formation with an “A” centered between two perfect “O’s”. Perhaps it’s a stretch to assert the theory that an ancient race of Marians has left us signs in our own alphabetic system. However, many other letters, such as “C”, “E”, “F”, “G”, “P”, “U” and “V”, appear in other pictures of Martian rocks that appear to have been deliberately carved. When one considers the fact that our present alphabet was derived from an ancient system of similar symbols, it begs the question; “did we invent this system or was it taught to us? And if so, by whom?”

I think it is ironic when I hear the words, “It is impossible for intelligent beings to live on planets in outer space”, when these contentions are being espoused by intelligent beings that live on a planet in outer space.

With the volume of data and images being beamed back to Earth from our sister planet, Mars, it may not be long before there is substantial evidence to prove that an intelligent race of beings, not that much different than our own, had its beginnings there. If a Martian civilization can reach the point of evolution that modern man might regard as “primitive” before some natural catastrophe befalls it, it is entirely possible that planets elsewhere in this vast universe have not only done the same but have continued to advance far beyond that point.

If the skeptic needs further confirmation of such a planet’s existence, they need only look beneath their feet.

Is Earth a Colony of Mars? by George Filer

The Filer Research Institute is dedicated to finding evidence for extraterrestrial life in the universe and for providing reports of these encounters.

Dr. Gilbert Levin Says Viking Found Life on Mars

Recently, I spoke with Dr. Gilbert Levin who designed the Viking Lander laboratories tests for life on Mars. He stated, "Mars has life and for some reason JPL seems to have a closed mind on the subject." Why is the NASA scientific community blatantly ignoring the crucial scientific data to support Mars life? It may be the result of a Brookings Institute report that the discovery of intelligent life could cause a world wide crisis.

In 1997, Biospherics' President and CEO, Dr. Gilbert V. Levin, announced his new conclusion that his 1976 Viking Lander Labeled Release (LR) life detection experiment found living microorganisms in the soil of Mars. Objective application of the scientific process to 21 years of continued research and to new developments on Mars and Earth forced this conclusion. Of all the many hypotheses offered over the years to explain the LR Mars results, the only possibility fitting all the relevant data is that microbial life exists in the top layer of the Martian surface.

Dr. Levin was hired by NASA to develop a laboratory to prove that life exists. He designed experiments that tested the soil of Mars nine times at two different landing sites under different temperature regimes and environmental conditions. All his data point to microbes metabolizing a nutrient solution and giving off an indicative radioactive CO2 gas. The tests conducted on Mars were positive indicating life, but were not accepted. Dr Levin states, "We have waited ten years for all of the theories, experiments and results produced by the many scientists investigating our experiment to be reviewed before voicing a committed conclusion of our own. After examining these efforts in great detail, and after years of laboratory work trying to duplicate our Mars data by non-biological means, we find that the preponderance of scientific analysis makes it more probable than not that living organisms were detected in the LR experiment on Mars.

This is not presented as an opinion, but as a position dictated by the objective evaluation of all relevant scientific data. In conclusion, then, we submit that this real possibility for Martian biology should be an important—even dominant—consideration in the future exploration of Mars. This clearly is not the case at the present time, according to published NASA plans for continuing the unmanned exploration of Mars which neglect the biology issue. The search for life on Mars, when evidence for its possible existence offers such important potential, should have much greater significance for the planning of such missions." Thanks to Dr. Gilbert Levin.

News Release NASA: 96-160, August 1996. James Hartfield (Johnson Space Center) David Salsbury (Stanford University) Excerpt:: The NASA-funded team found the first organic molecules thought to be of Martian origin: several mineral features characteristic of biologic activity; and possible microscopic fossils of primitive, bacteria-like organisms, inside of a Mars rock that fell to earth as a meteorite. The journal Science, reports the compounds they elicited from the meteorites found in Antarctica, were directly associated with fossil-like structures and carbonate globules in the rocks.

Meteorite found in Antarctica believed to contain bacterial life from Mars

Journal of Microscopy claims Australian scientists believe they have found evidence that life once existed on Mars. They have found that microscopic fossils of primitive bacteria-like organisms in a Mars meteorite match characteristics of bacteria found in mud in Queensland. Dr. Taylor says he has found enough evidence of life on Mars to warrant a manned mission to the red planet, and that more samples must be collected from Mars for further investigation..

Living "Blueberries"

Dr. Annamarie Johnestone writes, "Conclusions from an experiment on the Mars Viking Landau Mission, as well as additional experiments in similar earth environments since 1976, offer proof that "blueberries" photographed by Mars Opportunity Rover are lichens (a fungal sheath enveloping cyanobacteria or primitive algae). In Antarctica, endolithic (living in rock) bacteria, algae, lichens and fungi have been found alive inside of rock surfaces, to a depth of 1.5 cm. Like organisms have been photographed by the Opportunity Rover, in particular, "Blueberries" (lichens), in and on the Mars rocks.

Lichens are known to photosynthesize and grow in water vapor, as a sole source of water. Using infra red instruments, Anderson and Tice (1979) describe a hydrosphere at the Viking Lander site that they believe could support endolithic growth. Water vapor measured 50 precipitable microns at the surface of Mars. As well, lichens have all the characteristics necessary to live in the harsh Martian environment above the rock surface. In extreme temperatures of hot or cold, with only absorbed water vapor, lichens can withstand desiccation from wind and ultra violet radiation. Color photos from Viking Lander, displaying yellow and green patches that change color patterns with time, were observed to be similar to lichens on rocks, according to Levin and Straat (1988). e photos were computer analyzed for verification.

In my opinion, it is very unlikely, that inorganic substances would display like cyclic change. A changing pattern indicates living organisms. I observed that "blueberries" present in many Mars Rover photos were elevated above the rock surfaces. Some lichen species attach to rocks with a tube-like structure that absorbs and transports inorganic nutrients from the rock to the lichen's interior, algal-like, microbe component. Fungal acid excreted through the tube disintegrates the rock to facilitate the absorption process. Elevation of the exposed "blueberries" indicates an organic structure rather than an inorganic substance. Meteorites from Mars, analyzed by JPL and NASA, contained organic compounds (polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons) and fossilized primitive cells, according to Hartsfield and Salsbury (1996). Organic compounds are products of oxygen photosynthesizing bacteria and plants. Regrettably, the Mars Rover is not equipped to analyze organic substances. On earth, lichens are an indicator of clean air, as they flourish in an unpolluted atmosphere and diminish or disappear in polluted industrial areas. If there is a significant, living population of lichens on Mars, as displayed in large changing color patches, it would indicate that the atmosphere on Mars is not polluted.

Was Earth a Colony of Mars?

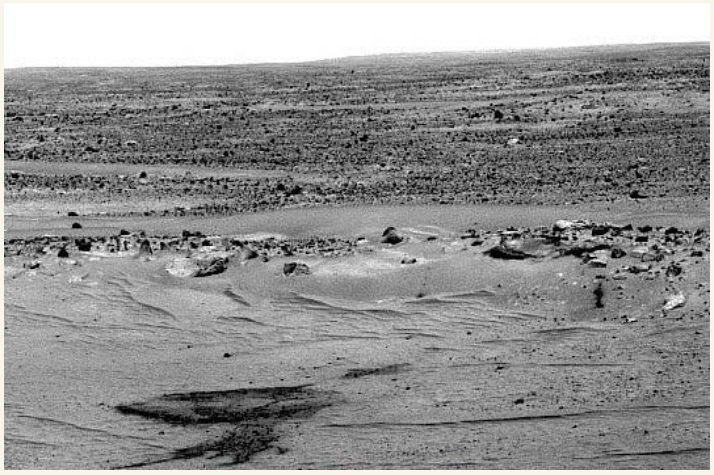
The evidence for life on Mars is accumulating each day and indicates its civilization is much older than ours. My analysis was based on twenty years experience as a flier, an intelligence officer and as a photo interpreter. Additionally, I have input from an experienced group of researchers and professional photographers and scientists. When photographic evidence suggested we had found potential Air Force targets, I would launch aircraft to obtain higher quality images. "I wish I could launch missions on interesting targets on Mars for high resolution images!" We thank JPL for making the evidence available from satellite, rover, and microscopic images that to us indicates life exists on the planet Mars. Unfortunately, due to the limitations on our web site and in sending data, I can not provide our readers with the same quality of images we are using for analysis.



We encourage you to visit the JPL web site at http://marsrovers.jpl.nasa.gov/gallery/all/ and check out the artifacts for yourself. The Spirit Rover landed in the Gusev crater and in our opinion struck an ancient city or temple site on Mars that we have nicknamed "Gavesak" based on some of the letters or symbols we have found. The area is covered with millions of rocks laying in the soil that were once part of this city that included stone carvings, symbols and sculpted faces. Although it is difficult to determine a date this happened based on the slim evidence, all indications are that the blast occurred thousands, if not millions of years ago. The main Gusev crater is estimated to be almost four billion years old when reptiles were beginning on Earth. Notice V on rock at left and possible face on right.

I also just located an 'A' and a 'V' on different rocks, also the number '17'on a rock, although this may represent a symbol 'LI' upside down. http://marsrovers.jpl.nasa.gov/gallery/all/2/p/061/2P131778439EFF1159P2212R2M1.JPG

Our experts in various life sciences are finding strong evidence of life. Below are some of our findings. Evidence of vegetation including trees, water, lichen and fossils indicating marine life and cynobacteria is evident. Since there are no means for testing for life on the rovers, photo interpretation becomes paramount. Many microscopic images from Opportunity Rover appear as bioenous sediments that argeological terms as "foraminiferal ooze" that are essentially marine sediments from the bottom of large bodies of water.

Did Noah Come From Mars?

Mars Orbiter Spacecraft located this are called by NASA the Inca City We can speculate that Mars gained intelligent life far in advance of Earth. A sophisticated society was formed not unlike Earth today, but a terrible disaster apparently occurred. Asteroids with the force of many nuclear weapons apparently exploded destroying many areas of the planet. The remaining inhabitants probably chose several courses of action. Many went underground to live, some may have built space ships and headed for Earth.

The story of Noah and the carrying of animals may have been an allegory of a space ship bringing animals here. !

We have located an image of a humanoid being we're calling 'Noah' that is in the upper left portion of NASA?JPL image. At his feet there is an apparent line of symbols or writing. This image indicates the intelligence had built a message for posterity. We are attempting to decipher.

Life is likely to follow a pattern of migration through the galaxy. Scientist Konstantin E. Tsilkovsky said that, "Colonization and not evolution, may be the major factor in the spread of life in the universe." The gravity on Mars is much less than Earth's and interplanetary flight distorting the gravitational field would have been much easier for them. If intelligent life forms migrate to new worlds, such as traveling the 140 million miles from Mars, it would be logical to take seeds, plants and animals to start basic agriculture. On Earth many basic foodstuffs, grains and some domestic cattle have no traceable wild ancestry. Such ancestry may have been brought to Earth from Mars. The beginning of Earth's agriculture occurred about ten thousand years ago in what now is Northern Iraq when wheat was first cultivated in the Neolithic Revolution. There are many symbols on Mars of life forms. Many can be seen on my website. www.nationalufocenter.com

On Spirit sol 65, I found an artifact which cannot by any means be explained away as a random basalt feature. This is a jaw-dropping, unarguably nonrandom shape! I have a degree in Agriculture, and I'm trained as a field zoologist and as a microbiologist, and my weapon of choice is the microscope. Mars – Catch Basins and Dams and Mars

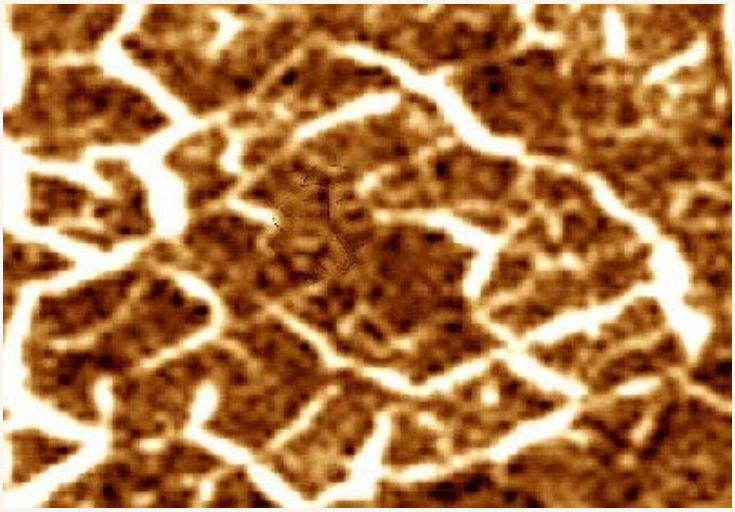
Inspection Engineer John E. Combest writes, "My transmittal of the annotated photos covering the Mars photo of a Lake-with-artificial-Dam was delayed because its original size - transmittal of the 7.64MB photos was too large to be permitted by my Internet provider. Therefore - lacking any software by which I could reduce the pixel count - I resorted to "print screen" tactics to reproduce the document so that it now consists of two photos with a total size of about 1.4 MB. Photo #1 includes what appears to be a dry lake bed with an artificial dam, and several smaller catch basins with the same type dam constructed to catch runoff from an area of deep ravines. The previous sent photos of the Square Building and other structures at coordinates 42S-158W is about 300 miles from this Lake scene at coordinates 39S -166W. If both photos had the same resolution, then it may be that the main Lake Dam may be several hundred of feet in length with a height of perhaps 40 feet. http://space.com/scienceastronomy/mars_earth_040311.html



Editors Note - This image of a possible structure with a tube like communication system is located near the South Pole. Each spring the snow melts at the poles of Mars and green vegetation appears to grow. These photos infer intelligent life on Mars has been building dams and attempting to preserve and transport water. Below is a close up of a typical tube discovered by J. P. Skipper who can be contacted at jskipper@marsanomalyresearch.com

. I speculate the tubes hundreds of feet in diameter could be used to carry water and train like vehicles. If a civilization existed on much would likely be underground.

Rover Takes Images of UFO's?

Robert Roy Britt reports that on March 11, 2004, the Spirit rover took the first picture of Earth ever made from the surface of another planet. It, also, spotted what could be a Viking Orbiter spacecraft or a meteor — scientists aren't sure which. The photo of Earth shows the planet as a bright dot above the horizon. Another sky photo from Spirit shows a thin and short streak of light. "That streak could have been a meteor," Lemmon said. Or it could have been the Viking Orbiter 2, still circling Mars long after its 1970s mission ended. Lemmon said the other nine spacecraft currently orbiting Mars — three of which are presently in working order — have known positions and did not create the streak.

Mark Lemmon, a rover team member from Texas A&M University, Texas, said "Is this the first image of a meteor on Mars, or an image of a spacecraft sent from another world during the dawn of our robotic space exploration program? We may never know, but we are still looking for clues." picture http://marsrovers.jpl.nasa.gov/gallery/press/spirit/20040311a/12-ml-03-strea k-A067R1.jpg

The Case For Absolute Artificiality

By Stewart Best

Strategies for the finding of alien intelligence need to be expanded considerably, says Dr. Allen Tough, a leading SETI proponent, as stated in his report entitled "How to Achieve Contact: Five Promising Strategies". He offered five basic strategies that could lead to alien or extraterrestrial contact. One of these strategies is for SETI to expand into the search for artificiality and intelligently designed structures or artifacts on other planets discovered via satellite photography. Dr. Tough stated:

"Five of these strategies are especially promising. Because a highly advanced civilization can readily send intelligent probes to monitor our society and telecommunications, we should (1) pursue a variety of means for searching the solar system and Earth for physical evidence of an alien object or its effects; (2) issue invitations asking ETI to have a dialogue with humankind; and (3) become sufficiently prepared for contact, thus encouraging ETI to respond. For evidence from many light-years away, the most promising strategies are (4) a search for astroengineering projects and their by-products and (5) radio and optical SETI. The bulk of this paper is devoted to these five promising strategies."
If we zero in on (1) Dr. Tough then says:

"A search for physical evidence could focus on the solar system or on Earth. And it could focus on phenomena that are normally studied by mainstream science or on stranger anomalous phenomena. These two distinctions enable us to cluster the various search approaches into four categories.

(a) Within the solar system, search for unassailable evidence of an alien object. This object might be a probe or spacecraft, for instance, or its discarded parts. Such a search might focus on the Moon, the asteroid belt, or the Lagrange equilibrium points (Freitas and Valdes, 1980). Alternatively, the alien object might be a building, a monument, or some other artificial structure. Indeed, an alien intelligence may have deliberately left an artifact for us to discover at some special landmark in the solar system, such as the highest point on Mars or the deepest canyon on Venus, or in some carefully chosen spot that we will explore someday because of our scientific curiosity or our appreciation of beauty. Or equipment might have been stored below the surface of some body (perhaps in natural cracks or passages) to protect it from damage by cosmic radiation and micrometeorites."

"Baugher (1985, p. 155) has even suggested that an alien probe might, on one of the geologically dead moons in the solar system, "construct a vault filled with information and artifacts.... The vault could contain a description of the civilization that sent the probe, as well as a set of instructions for the initiation of contact."
Another quote of importance is from "Intelligent Life in the Universe" written by Dr. Carl Sagan and I.S. Shklovskii which was published in 1966. This quote is from page 461:

theUFOstore.com

"With the numbers we have discussed, IT SEEMS POSSIBLE THAT THE EARTH HAS BEEN VISITED BY VARIOUS GALACTIC CIVILIZATIONS MANY TIMES (POSSIBLY EVERY 10,000 YEARS) DURING GEOLOGICAL TIME. IT IS NOT OUT OF THE QUESTION THAT ARTIFACTS OF THESE VISITS STILL EXIST – although none have been found to date – or EVEN THAT SOME TYPE OF BASE IS MAINTAINED IN THE SOLAR SYSTEM TO PROVIDE CONTINUITY FOR SUCCESSIVE EXPEDITIONS. Because of weathering and the possibility of detection and interference by the inhabitants of the Earth, IT MIGHT BE PREFERABLE NOT TO ERECT SUCH A BASE ON THE EARTH'S SURFACE." (caps added for emphasis.)

Dr. Sagan and Mr. Shklovskii, back in 1966, thought it might be possible that there could be secret bases in the Solar System. They suggested we might find such a base on the backside of the moon, placed there to avoid the prying eyes of the human race. In the alternative, bases placed there by certain elite members of the human race to avoid detection of their clandestine operations are possible even if improbable. There is a great amount of evidence that suggests that Tithonia was built in such a way as to camouflage it, that is, to hide it from prying eyes.

But the questions then become (1) would the scientific community accept the evidence presented, or (2) would they, and the people of the world, reject it because of primal fear of the unknown? The Brookings Report suggested that religionists, especially Christians, along with scientists and engineers would have difficulty accepting proof of artificiality - which suggests that they would reject it if there was any way they could do so.

Richard Hoagland and other Martian investigators have run into a solid wall of resistance with the SETI teams even though they have provided far more evidence of artificiality than all of the SETI efforts to date.

Dr. McDaniel makes a statement that might explain, at least in part, why NASA and their related contractors are so totally against independent researchers, and attempts to silence them via ridicule and mocking, or via "scientific analysis" which is nothing more than blatant attempts to silence what NASA is so vigorously attempting to hide:

"In 1960, a report titled "Proposed Studies on the Implications of Peaceful Space Activities for Human Affairs" was delivered to the Chairman of NASA's Committee on Long-Range Studies. The report was prepared under contract to NASA by the Brookings Institution, Washington D.C. The report outlines the need to investigate the possible social consequences of an extraterrestrial discovery and to consider whether such a discovery should BE KEPT FROM THE PUBLIC IN ORDER TO AVOID POLITICAL CHANGE AND A POSSIBLE "DEVASTATING" EFFECT ON SCIENTISTS THEMSELVES - DUE TO THE DISCOVERY THAT MANY OF THEIR OWN MOST CHERISHED THEORIES COULD BE AT RISK." (Caps added for emphasis.)

The Brookings Report is well worth a read. We quote from several pertinent parts:

"The recent publicity given to efforts to detect extraterrestrial messages via radio telescope has popularized-and legitimized - speculations about the impact of such a discovery on human values. It is conceivable that there is semi-intelligent life in some part of our solar system or highly intelligent life which is not technologically oriented, and many cosmologists and astronomers think it very likely that there is intelligent life in other solar systems. While face-to-face meetings with it will not occur within the next 20 years (unless its technology is more advanced than ours, qualifying it to visit earth), ARTIFACTS LEFT AT SOME POINT IN TIME BY THESE LIFE FORMS MIGHT POSSIBLY BE DISCOVERED THROUGH OUR SPACE ACTIVITIES ON THE MOON, MARS OR VENUS...

THE DISCOVERY WOULD CERTAINLY BE FRONT-PAGE NEWS EVERYWHERE; THE DEGREE OF POLITICAL OR SOCIAL REPERCUSSION WOULD PROBABLY DEPEND ON LEADERSHIP'S INTERPRETATION OF (1) ITS OWN ROLE, (2) THREATS TO THAT ROLE, AND (3) NATIONAL AND PERSONAL OPPORTUNITIES TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE DISRUPTION OR REINFORCEMENT OF THE ATTITUDES AND VALUES OF OTHERS…

The Fundamentalist (and anti-science) sects are growing apace around the world and, as missionary enterprises, may have schools and a good deal of literature attached to them. One of the important things is that, where they are active, they appeal to the illiterate and semiliterate (including, as missions, the preachers as well as the congregation) and can pile up a very influential following in terms of numbers. FOR THEM, THE DISCOVERY OF OTHER LIFE -

RATHER THAN ANY OTHER SPACE PRODUCT - WOULD BE ELECTRIFYING…

It has been speculated that of all groups, SCIENTISTS AND ENGINEERS MIGHT BE THE MOST DEVASTATED by the discovery of relatively superior creatures…"

Aside from the obvious bias against Christianity (comprised evidently of illiterates and semi-literate folks who would not understand anything and panic), the Brookings Report probably reflects the inner thinking of NASA, and thus any evidence discovered by them would be immediately suppressed, and any evidence found by independent sources would have to be discredited by NASA through the mainstream media by any methods available. This would of course include ridicule, mocking and possible personal attack to destroy the messenger. The truth, of course, would not be relevant – the agenda of deception and suppression of such evidence becomes paramount and the only guiding principle.

Richard Hoagland and other Martian investigators have run into a solid wall of resistance with the SETI teams even though they have provided far more evidence of artificiality than all of the SETI efforts to date. Yet no interest appears to be forthcoming from either government or private scientific SETI groups to investigate these anomalies with high resolution cameras. Can the NASA/JPL/MSSS matrix be trusted to rephotograph Tithonia or Cydonia without Congressional oversight, and without a select committee of qualified experts looking over their shoulder to be sure nothing is "altered"?

Yet another quote of interest is from The McDaniel Report, written some time ago by Dr. Charles McDaniel, Professor Emeritus and Former Chairman, Department of Philosophy, Sonoma State University. He has some very harsh words for NASA and Dr. Malin: "When forwarded inquiries from constituents by United States Senators and Representatives, NASA has provided answers which may appear plausible to the uninformed, but which cannot withstand even the slightest logical scrutiny. Among the various misleading assurances given by NASA are those having to do with NASA's policy for Mars Observer Camera data release. On the first mission to Mars in seventeen years, with growing public interest in the artificiality hypothesis and NASA's vigorous resistance to that hypothesis, NASA made a radical change in the way photographic data from the spacecraft would be handled. Unlike previous missions, there was to be no conveyance of camera data to the public as soon as it was received and converted into viewable images (what is often called "live" transmission). INSTEAD, IMAGES FROM THE MARS OBSERVER CAMERA WOULD BE UNDER THE CONTROL OF A PRIVATE CONTRACTOR FOR UP TO SIX MONTHS AFTER ACQUISITION." (caps and bolding added for emphasis.)

"This same private contractor has been given sole authority to determine, not only what images would be released and when, but even what objects would be photographed by the high resolution camera. That contractor, Dr. Michael Malin, IS AN OUTSPOKEN OPPONENT OF THE HYPOTHESIS OF POSSIBLE ARTIFICIALITY. (Dr. McDaniel is speaking of the FACE ON MARS.) Dr. Malin's arguments against the hypothesis of possible artificiality have been uniformly fallacious. Thus the interests of the American public in relation to Mars Observer Camera data were effectively turned over to the prejudiced decisions of a private individual." - Dr. MacDaniel.

EVIDENCE OF ARTIFICIALITY: THE MINING OR MANUFACTURING PLANT

The definition of artificial according to Random House is this: "1. Made by human skill; produced by man (opposed to natural)." We could then say, because man is an intelligent creature that the definition is: MADE BY INTELLIGENT SKILL, PRODUCED BY INTELLIGENCE (AS OPPOSED TO NATURAL FORMATIONS). The definition of artifact is also interesting: "any object made by man, something made by skill" or any object made by intelligence, something made with skill.

A large number of books and articles have been written attempting to prove intelligent design at Cydonia, "Pyramids On Mars", written by Vladimir Avinsky was published in Soviet Life, "The Case For The Face", by Stanley V. McDaniel, and then of course Richard Hoagland's book "THE MONUMENTS OF MARS: A CITY ON THE EDGE OF FOREVER", and many more, all of which go to great lengths to prove that the Face On Mars was in fact artificial, the product of forced engineering, of alien intelligence. However, Tithonia is totally different than the Face On Mars.

1. The Face On Mars scale is huge, 2.5 kilometers long, and 1 kilometer wide, and about 400 meters high. It is composed of a group of mounded, natural material, which NASA writes off as simply a small group of hills and ridges that, by their arrangement only APPEARS to look like a face – that light and shadow are playing tricks on us. They state that in reality it is a "natural" anomalous object that just happens to sit by itself in the middle of a flat plain, and just so happens to have the same scale and shape of a face. However, the location of this object, in the middle of a flat plain, obvious "sculptured" look of the hairline, and the correct proportions to a humanoid face all raise serious questions. Then there is the pyramid cluster and the mathematics presented by Hoagland. The scale of the Face has raised questions in some minds. However, when compared to earth drawings found scattered over the planet, such as the NAZCA LINES in Peru, it is not at all impossible that a symbol of such size could be built by entities unknown for religious purposes or other reasons.

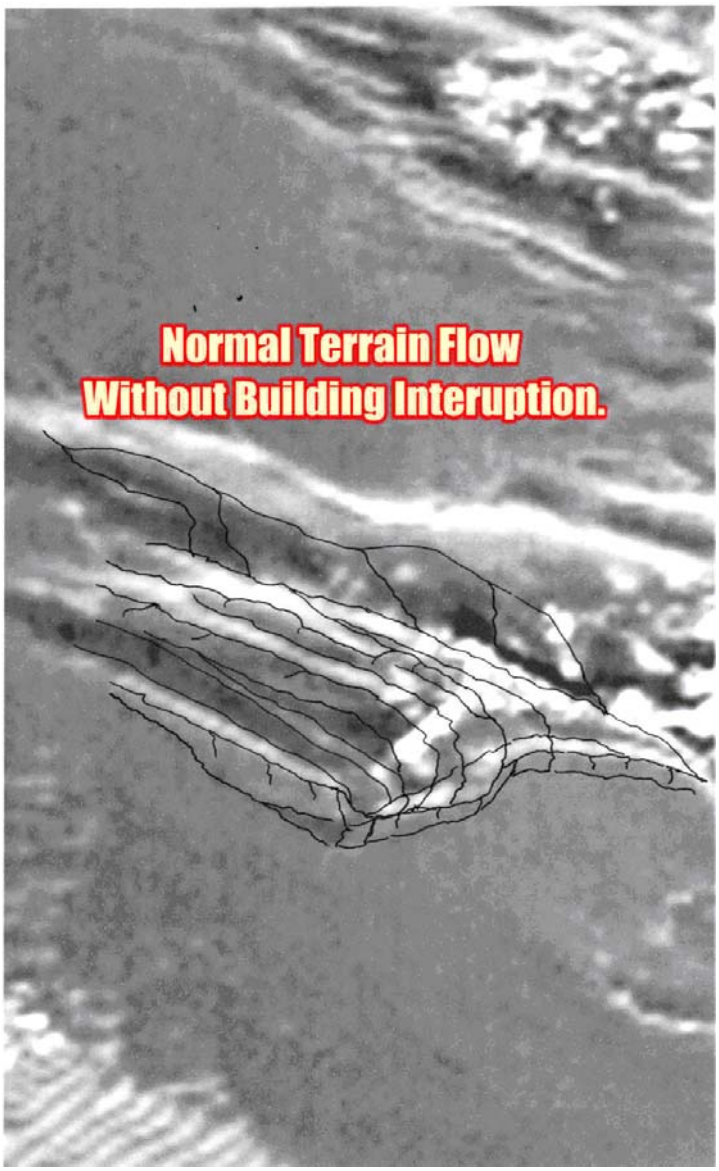
TERRAIN ANALYSIS
1. The flow of the land is terminated by a structure that is positioned at a 90-degree angle to the flow.
2. The terracing is stopped and the hill has been excavated to form a retaining wall for the structure.



2. Tithonia has no such problems within it, because the structures at Tithonia are very clearly architectural. That is, they display all of the signs of forced engineering, straight and parallel lines, flat walls, flat roofs, openings where one might expect to find them, and pathways leading into the structures. Their scale is totally consistent with other features in the cluster, with structures ranging from 150 feet tall to over 240 feet tall – but all of them easily identified with EARTH SCALE. Further, there are many structures, not just one, two or three! The combinations of many structures, all of which display the above criteria, forge the claim of incontrovertible evidence!

One of the chief arguments raised by Hoagland and others is the arrangement of the face – that is, it is symmetrical – with two eyes, a nose, mouth, forehead, chin, and rounded hairline. When cut in half, both sides appear to be somewhat balanced. In other words, it has a humanoid face appearance, and while the left is slightly different from the right, the odds are that nature could not produce such a symmetrical shape. There is no question whatever that the Face is a very strange and unusual formation of mounded material and very possibly molded into that shape. However it does have features that COULD BE "natural". And thus that argument will never end. Tithonia, on the other hand, has nothing to do with hills or ridges and light and shadow playing tricks on the eyes – because the structures at Tithonia display all of the criteria used in architectural engineering – and none of the parameters used are missing in these structures.

These differences are important – because while one is attempting to show that the natural flow of the Face, admittedly mounded and molded, and could well be engineeered, it does display many features that could be natural! However, it is also possible it is not engineered at all! This is the quagmire of Cydonia – for one can attempt to FORCE a natural object into an engineered object by argument. It is nearly impossible to FORCE AN ENGINEERED

OBJECT into a NATURAL OBJECT, for engineered architecture has unmistakable signs to it, and these attributes, these criteria, are used by intelligence agencies every day of the week to determine if an enemy country is building a new complex, a missile complex, factory, roadway, or whatever. How do they do it? By using the criteria that SEPARATES natural objects from engineered!!

Tithonia is the first time in recorded history that we have absolute proof of ENGINEERING on another planet, and that engineering is clearly unmistakable, for it fulfills all of the criteria used to identify something as artificial. If the criteria or parameters used on Earth to establish an enemy fortification are accepted here, why are they not acceptable on Mars? Not only do we have one object that defies all attempts to classify it as natural, we have many structures at Tithonia, all grouped into clusters – and that grouping also displays intelligence, for the buildings all conform to the identical scale and forge a well- defined community, with roadways, pathways, flat areas for walking as well as signs of tunneling or excavation.

Clearly Tithonia is radically different from anything ever found on Mars to date. So blatant, and so obvious, it is virtually unbelievable (which is precisely why the charges of fraud, manipulation of photographs, or airbrushing in structures, etc. were leveled when RedStar introduced Tithonia in November). It is this blatant and obvious difference from Cydonia that causes people to reject it. They say, “If these buildings are there, and are so clearly visible, they would have been found before”. New things that were right in front of people are “discovered” every day. Mars is no exception. RedStar makes no claims to “discovery”. RedStar merely investigated the site and makes the claims of artificiality based on that investigation.

We will investigate only one structure in this segment - the large rectangular structure that sits to the west of the city cluster within the city wall. This structure is one of the most obvious to everyone - and it also contains a multitude of parallel lines, flat walls, flat roof, 90-degree corners and 90-degree edges. It contains a centered object on top of its roof, and the long protrusion in front of the main structure is perfectly parallel to and joins perfectly with the main structure. All of these items are items of artificiality, and prove intelligent design. As Jeff Rense said on the Jeff Rense Program, “You’ve got it Stewart...this is the most intriguing Martian anomaly I have seen to date. Only one of the right angles or parallel angles of the many you have demonstrated has to be real, and we would have what certainly appears to be genuine artificiality. Your discovery seems to eclipse the Face On Mars and the more I look, the more I begin to see. Talk about anomalies...Tithonia is the most intriguing yet.”

THE EAST WALL
The East wall of this building also has perfectly parallel lines that form a perfect rectangle. The foundation line is obstructed because of a hexagon structure that is right next to it.

We have many more than ONE SET of parallel lines in this structure alone, let alone the hexagons, the step pyramids, and the others that are clearly engineered. Extraordinary claims, it is said, require extraordinary proof. We will attempt to show you how the architectural design of these structures matches those found on earth, how they fulfill all criteria for intelligent design, and therefore must be classified as artificial; and this is especially true of the large building we simply call the MINING OR MANUFACTURING BUILDING.

THE LAND ANALYSIS

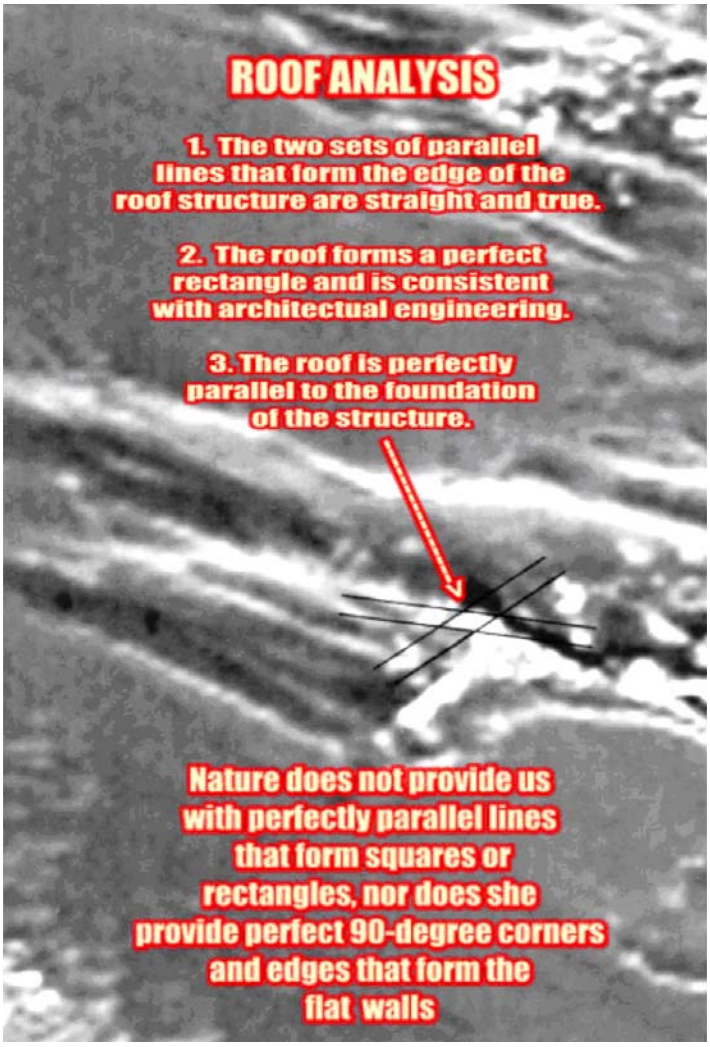
One of the important considerations in determination of artificiality is the land flow that surrounds the artifact in question. The main features to be considered are:

1. Is the artifact or object in question totally anomalous to the surrounding terrain and flow of the terrain?
2. How does the object position itself in relationship to the surrounding flow of the terrain? That is, does it align itself with the flow (evidence of a natural object of some type) or does it juxtapose itself at angles inconsistent with the natural flow and ebb of the land in question?
3. Does the artifact or object in question have the same characteristics as those found nearby that can be identified as natural?
4. If the artifact is anomalous to everything in the area, and the angle at which it sits into the terrain is not aligned with the normal ebb and flow, then we must investigate the artifact itself. Does it display the required characteristics of an engineered structure?

These are crucial points in the determination of artificiality - and the object/artifact must display anomalous placement, anomalous shape, and it must terminate the natural ebb and flow of the terrain. The large rectangular building in question displays the characteristics required for closer examination:

It interrupts abruptly the normal flow and angle of the rolling or terraced land - as it is not only cut into the terrain itself, but sits at an almost perfect 90-degree angle to the flow of the terrain, even though the building is damaged. The terrain is rolling, and as we look from the left and follow to the right, we see it rises slightly, levels off and then there is a dramatic shift in the "terracing" immediately to the left of the structure - it goes from straight to circular, drops abruptly, and then disappears behind the structure itself. The structure's western wall is actually placed into the hill - which shows clear engineering intent and intelligent design. Why would nature suddenly terminate its even flow, place a perfectly rectangular structure 90-degrees to that flow, and then dig it into the side of the hill?



ROOF ANALYSIS
1. The two sets of parallel lines that form the edge of the roof structure are straight and true.
2. The roof forms a perfect rectangle and is consistent with architectual engineering.
3. The roof is perfectly parallel to the foundation of the structure.
Nature does not provide us with perfectly parallel lines that form squares or rectangles, nor does she provide perfect 90-degree corners and edges that form the flat walls

OBJECT CENTERED ON ROOF
The object is clearly centered and runs parallel with the main roof line. If forms two more parallel lines that merge with the roof lines and the foundation lines.

What is important here is the 90-degree placement of this structure to the terrain, and its obvious placement below terrain level, which might be because of prevailing winds at the site - but whatever the reason, this structure totally fulfills the critera for intelligent design by its placement alone. It is totally anomalous in many ways:

1. As stated it sits at a 90-degree angle to the flow of the terrain.

2. The structure is carved into the side hill on the west side, but the roof line is perfectly flat and straight, and is parallel on both sides, front to back.

3. The interruption of the flow of the land in and of itself might not prove artificial design, but the structure's shape, with perfectly flat walls, 90-degree corners, perfect 90-degree edges up and down where the adjoining walls meet along the entire roof line, are totally anomalous to the surrounding flow of the land or any objects anywhere around it.

THE FRONT WALL FACE (SOUTH FACE)

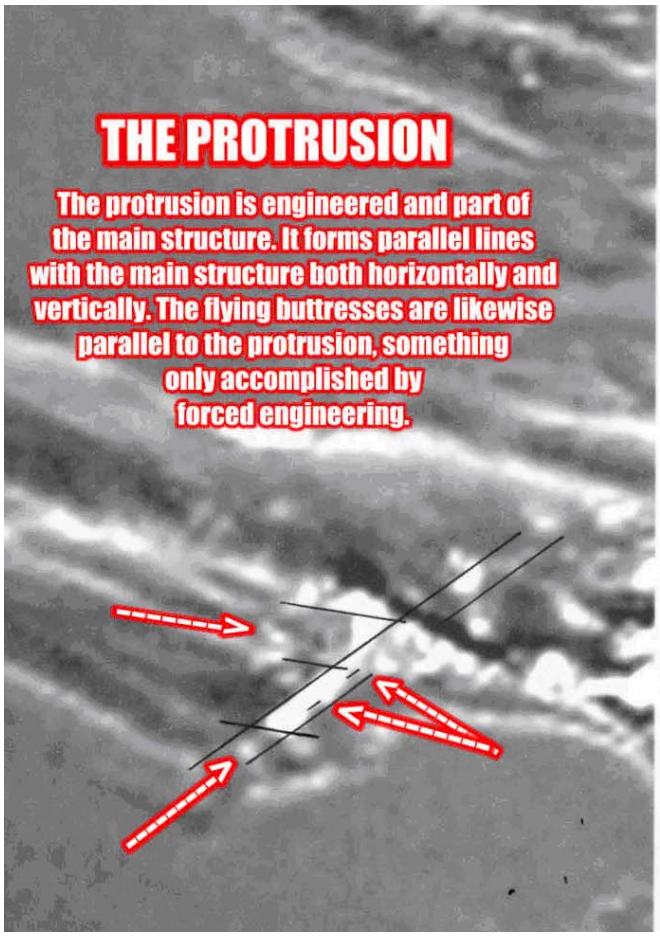
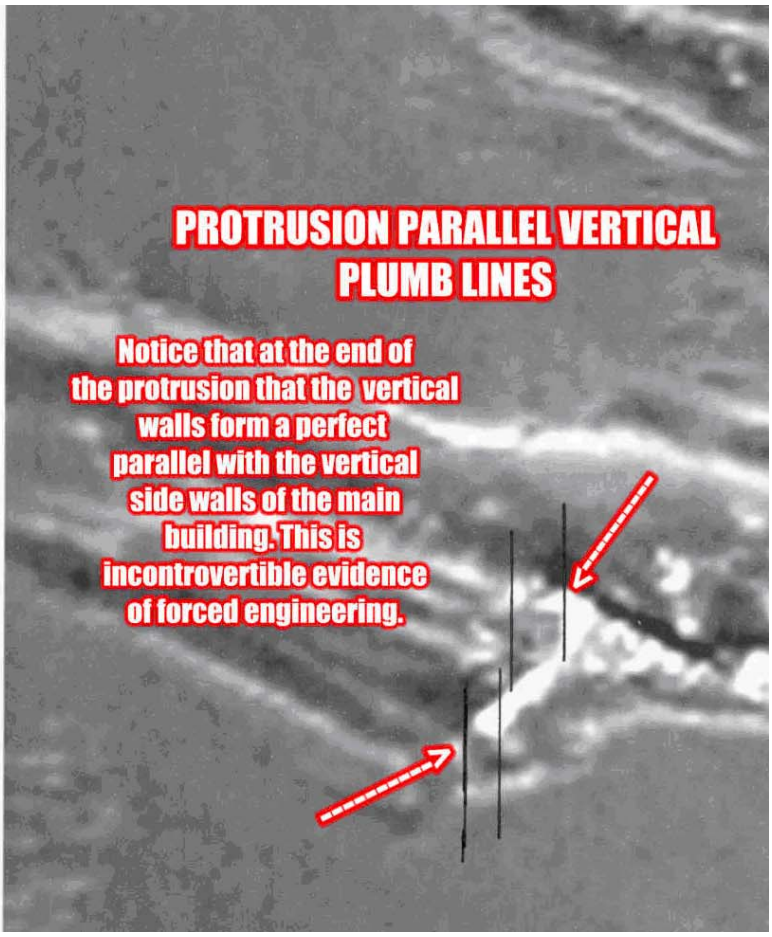
When dealing with architectural design for engineered structures, we are looking for repeated patterns - that is, a repetition of parallel lines and repeated angles at the corners and where walls and roofs join. We should see straight edges, and consistency in overall design.

1) The vertical lines at the corners of the walls are perfectly parallel or we could say "square" or "plumb". Nature does not provide us with "plumb



THE PROTRUSION
The protrusion is engineered and part of the main structure. It forms parallel lines with the main structure both horizontally and vertically. The flying buttresses are likewise parallel to the protrusion, something only accomplished by forced engineering.



PROTRUSION PARALLEL VERTICAL PLUMB LINES
Notice that at the end of the protrusion that the vertical walls form a perfect parallel with the vertical side walls of the main building. This is incontrovertible evidence of forced engineering.

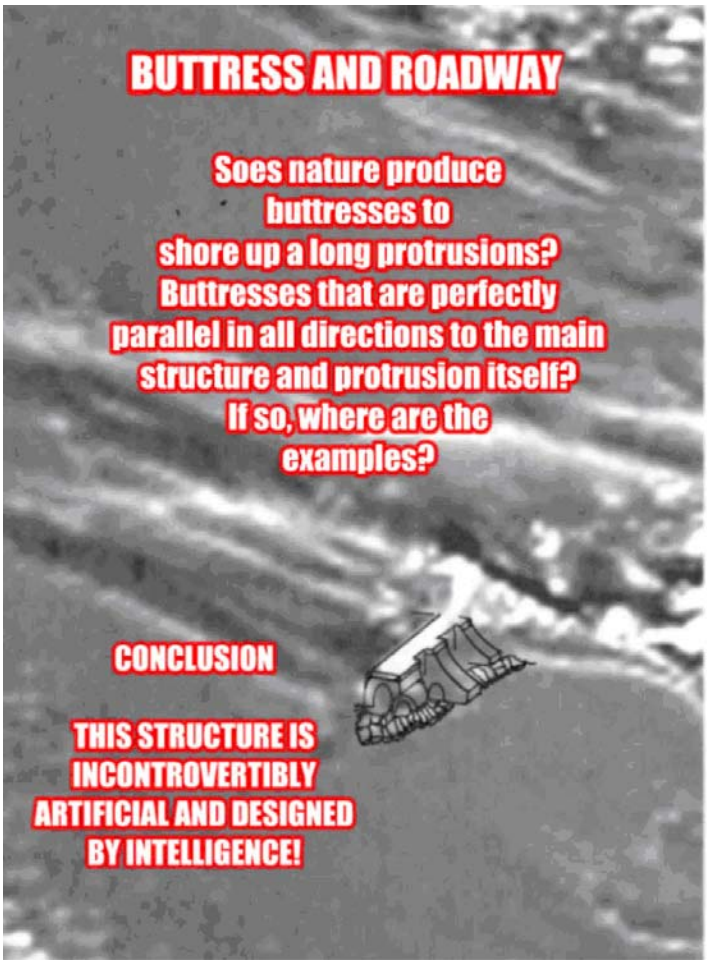
line" parallel edges that are parallel from top to bottom, and offer 90-degree straight edges up and down - and equal spacing from foundation to the roof. However, any architect or engineer would understand that, and design a structure like it.

2) We are also looking for 90-degree (three way) at the corners where the roof line meets the walls - and this should be repeated four times, which obviously it is in this rectangular structure.

3) The walls should then be a near perfect square or rectangle, flat and smooth - just as any engineered building is. These patterns repeat themselves in engineered structures.

The first things we will look at are the vertical corners of the front or "face" of the building. Notice that the west edge and the east edge form perfectly parallel lines, and these parallels meet other to make edges which have 90-degree corners, going straight up in total alignment (for vertical, and stright accross for horizonatal alignment - when was the last time you saw that in nature?

The second thing to notice is that where the walls meet the roof line, we have perfect 90-degree angles in two directions. This is not natural; it is FORCED DESIGN, FORCED ARCHITECTURE, FORCED ENGINEERING. But there is much more here as well - notice that the face wall is perfectly flat and has what appears to be several large but damaged windows or openings of some type and one of them is a perfect rectangle within the rectangle of the face wall (South wall, as we are looking North in orientation). Is all of this just natural coincidence? If so, why does this not appear on earth?



Now if we look at the top of the face wall, and we draw a horizontal line across the top and one along the bottom we have another parallel line situation - and the face itself forms a perfect rectangle, close to being perfectly square. All told now, we have two sets of parallel lines, with four corners, three edges, and all are 90-degree angle!! Was all of this expertly done by nature?

THE RECTANGULAR WINDOW/SOLAR COLLECTOR ON THE FACE WALL

As you look at the front face wall, you will notice a large rectangular object on the front face, that gives the appearance of a large opening, such as a window, or a large solar collector ( actually there are three of them if one examines this structure closely under enhanced conditions). The important feature here is that this large object is engineered into the wall itself, for it is perfectly parallel with vertical and horizontal wall lines. This object has two sets of parallel lines that match the other wall lines, as well as 90-degree corners - another proof of intelligent architectural design. Does nature provide us with rectangles within rectangles, with perfect alignment to the main structure?

THE EASTERN WALL

The next wall we will look at is the wall facing to the east, or the right side to us as we look at the photograph. This wall is likewise perfectly flat, rises vertical and is "plumb". It is the same height at the front as it is in the back. The foundation line and the roof line (although the roof is perhaps slightly arched or we are seeing sun flare), are perfectly parallel - they form, with the back wall and the front wall another perfect rectangle - clearly another sign of intelligent design.

Thus far we have two flat walls, all lines parallel, a multitude of 90-degree angles, straight edgelines and perfect rectangles formed by both walls. Are we really to believe this is a natural structure or a rock formation of some type?

THE ROOF STRUCTURE

The next feature that confirms intelligent design is the roof itself. Since when does nature provide a roof structure that ii the exact same size as the rising walls? That is, flat or slightly arched, but clearly connected to the main structure itself?

24 Hour Order-Fax Line 541.523.2630

As shown, the roof lines front to back on each side of the building form another set of parallel lines - perfectly aligned and square, just as the building itself is perfectly plumb - even if in ruins. All of these parallel lines and 90-degree angles refute any attempt to place them in a "natural" category.

THE OBJECT CENTERED ON THE TOP OF THE ROOF

Centered on top of the roof is an object that is slightly curved but runs parallel to the roof line on both sides, east and west. These lines are perfectly aligned to the wall lines - again forming many parallel lines.

THE PROTRUSION

There is a large protrusion that comes out from the main structure going south. This protrusion is engineered into the main building and is a part of it. The protrusion is perfectly parallel with the roof lines, west and east wall lines and the foundation lines. This protrusion is perfectly flat and runs straight and true right to the end, and the end of this protrusion forms two sets of parallel lines as well, forming a near perfect square or rectangle. This is additional confirmation of architectural engineering; a feat nature does not provide. This protrusion has suffered damage and appears to be breaking up in some parts - but the evidence is incontrovertible that it is engineered and is part of the main building structure.

THE BUTTRESSES

The long protrusion appears to have two "buttresses" - and you can see the tops of them on the flat floor of the protrusion - they then drop off and disappear into the shadows. One of them, and possibly both of them, have tunnels through them as we can see a pathway or roadway leading into the front one - and see it coming out of the other side. Buttresses are a sure sign of engineering, for it is the only way to strengthen such a long thin protrusion - and if this is indeed a mining facility of some type, it may be where the waste goes.

What is astounding here is that the two buttresses are parallel with each other, and also parallel to the protrusion itself!! All of these parallel lines prohibit any interpretation of "natural anomaly". It is beyond all chance that this structure is some rock formation that just happened as freak of nature.

THE PATHWAY OR ROADWAY

If we look at the full view of this structure, the hexagon structure beside it, and the statue, we will notice a pathway that splits up and divides itself, with one part going through a large archway, the other curving around and then splitting up to enter the hexagon structure, the rest going into the "buttresses" and around the protrusion itself. Does nature provide us with roadways or pathways? How much evidence is required?

CONCLUSION

When one combines these elements - the straight and parallel verticals, horizontals, the 90-degree corners and edges, the flat walls, the roof and centered object on the roof, and we couple all of this to the long protrusion which displays the identical parallel lines as the main building, the flat surface on the top, and how it meshes with the foundation of the other structure, we have no choice. This is engineered, this is artificial; it was built by intelligence. If we take all of this, and then we see how this structure sits in relationship to the ebb and flow of the terrain right beside it, and we find that it totally and abruptly terminates this flow by sitting at 90-degrees to it, we are then placed into a position of either denial or acceptance of the simple facts. This is intelligently designed, cut right into the hillside, and the terracing beside it proves it. Now when you consider this, and then take into account the pathways, how can anyone dispute artificiality? It is an insult to mankinds logic, and our built-in ability to discern, to have someone claim this is all just "natural".

In Part Two, we will offer even more proof of incontrovertible intelligent design, for we will examine a structure that is difficult to build correctly, and requires a high degree of technical knowledge and ability to construct. It fulfills all criteria for intelligent design and a full knowledge of architecture. Stay tuned for more explosive documentation. WE ARE NOT ALONE!

MOD & UFOs
The OFFICIAL History

By Nick Pope and Georgina Bruni

This world exclusive article revealed for the first time the secret history of the British Government's early involvement in the UFO issue, giving an insight into the politics and personalities responsible for shaping official policy. The bulk of this article concerns the post-war period, but to understand what happened and why, we need to go back a little further.

Scareships

The mysterious wave of airship sightings that took place over America in 1896 and 1897 were mirrored by a series of sightings that took place in Britain, starting in 1909. One of the first of these so-called 'scareship' sightings occurred in the early hours of 23 March 1909, when PC Kettle from Peterborough heard a strange buzzing sound from above. When he looked up, he saw a bright light attached to an immense, oblong-shaped craft, which moved at a fairly high speed across the sky. Numerous further sightings were reported.

On 13 May 1909 an airship of about 100 feet in length was seen over Kelmarsh in Northamptonshire, while on the same night two men claimed to have seen a landed airship on Ham Common in London and spoken to the two crewmen, who they said were German and American. The German asked for some tobacco for his pipe and the two witnesses reported having been blinded by a searchlight during some of the sighting. Another report of a landed airship concerned an event that took place on 18 May 1909, on Caerphilly Mountain in South Wales. The witness reported having seen two strangely-dressed occupants who he heard talking to each other in a strange language that he was unable to identify. A subsequent examination of the alleged landing site revealed some damage to the ground.

The public perception was that these were sightings of German airships carrying out reconnaissance missions. But there is no indication that Count Ferdinand von Zeppelin's airship programme was sufficiently advanced in 1909 to conduct such operations over the UK. In any case, German airships of the period could manage nothing remotely close to the sorts of speeds and manoeuvres that were being reported. The British airship programme was significantly less advanced than the German one, so we do not believe that the 'scareship' mystery can be explained in terms of prototype British military hardware with which members of the public would be unfamiliar. To this day these sightings remain unexplained. Further information can be found in The Scareship Mystery - A Survey of Phantom Airship Scares, 1909 - 1918, edited by Nigel Watson.

Our reason for mentioning these sightings is that they mark the beginning of official interest in unexplained aerial phenomena. The 1909 wave was followed by further reports in 1912 and this is where our story begins in earnest. There had been sightings of an airship over Sheerness in Kent and with tension between Britain and Germany being so high, it was suggested that a Zeppelin was involved. On 27 November 1912 William Joynson-Hicks MP raised the matter in Parliament and quizzed the First Lord of the Admiralty about the events. The latter confirmed that reports had been received, but said that subsequent investigation had not produced any explanation for what had been seen. The First Lord of the Admiralty at the time was Winston Churchill.

Sightings continued throughout 1913 and one consequence of this was the strengthening of the Aerial Navigation Act of 1911. A Bill was duly passed which set up prohibited areas. If these were violated or if an airship failed to respond to signals from the ground, it could then be shot down and to enable this to be carried out, the War Office stepped up efforts to produce a gun capable of bringing down an airship. The War Office continued to investigate the 1913 sightings, but drew a blank.

While the media championed the theory that these sightings involved German dirigibles, some newspapers suspected that hoaxes or hysteria might be more logical explanations, especially in the cases of those reports involving sightings of landed craft and occupants. Crucially, however, the Government was not prepared to make such a judgement and continued to take the view that all sightings should be investigated. If there is evidence that your airspace is being penetrated by aerial craft one does not ignore the data. Whatever one's personal beliefs, anyone within government and the military cannot ignore evidence of this nature and must assume that they are hostile. If governments investigate such things and they turn out to be bogus, all they lose is a little time and money. But if they ignore something that turns out to be real and hostile, they leave the country vulnerable, as well losing the opportunity to exploit it (e.g. copying the technology). This philosophy underpins official interest not just in UFOs but in other areas such as remote viewing, so in a sense the War Office response to the scareship mystery set the template for future official investigations into UFOs.

Foo Fighters

Most UFO researchers are familiar with the Foo Fighter mystery, which involved strange balls of light and small, metallic objects seen by both Allied and Axis pilots during the Second World War. File AIR 14/2800 at the Public Record Office contains one of the few surviving official British reports of these objects, detailing how aircrew from Bomber Command's 115 Squadron saw some of these strange objects on bombing raids in December 1943.

What is more pertinent to this story is the way in which the Foo Fighter sightings were viewed by the British Government. Perhaps the best indication comes from Professor R. V. Jones, one of the key wartime scientific intelligence experts and someone who is one of the key figures in this story, even though his involvement with the UFO issue is not widely known. Writing in chapter 52 of his book Most Secret War, he says:

"We had already seen scares arise during the war by the imaginations of men under strain interpreting fearfully observations which had a natural explanation. KGr 100 pilots had seen red lights over England. We had to deal with reports of Fifth Columnists letting off rockets; and our bomber crews had reported single-engine nightfighters with yellow lights in their noses over Germany at times when we knew that no single-engine nightfighters were flying."

Foo Fighter sightings, so it seems, were dismissed out of hand by officialdom. Or were they?

R. V. Jones

As R. V. Jones features prominently in this history of officialdom's involvement with the UFO issue, we should give a brief summary of his career. He was a protégé of Churchill's key scientific advisor Frederick Lindemann (later Lord Cherwell) and Sir Henry Tizard. He played a key role in anticipating and countering German technical advances in fields such as radar, radio-beam navigation, V-1 and V-2 weapons and the embryonic German nuclear programme. He was appointed as Assistant Director of Intelligence(Science) in 1941 and promoted to Director of Intelligence in 1946. He left government service that same year, taking the chair of Natural Philosophy (the old term for physics) at the University of Aberdeen, his candidacy having been supported by Winston Churchill and Lord Cherwell. He returned to government service in 1952 at Churchill's request, as Director of Scientific Intelligence at the MOD, but returned to his academic career at Aberdeen at the end of 1953.

During his government service Jones forged very close links with the Americans, especially the CIA, who in 1993 honoured him with a perpetual intelligence medal in his name. When he died in 1997 the CIA issued a press release containing eulogies from Director George Tenet and former Director James Woolsey (This press release can be viewed online at www.cia.gov).

Jones' involvement in the UFO issue is not widely known, but is documented in a number of sources, including the following:

1. Chapter 52 of his book Most Secret War.
2. Annex V of the Condon report.
3. CIA Chief Historian Gerald Haines' article CIA's Role in the Study of UFOs, 1947-90: A Die-hard Issue.
4. Private papers held at the Churchill Archives Centre, Churchill College, Cambridge.

A British Crash Retrieval?

Before we return to R. V. Jones, we will make brief mention of how US journalist Dorothy Kilgallen alleged that the British Government had recovered a crashed UFO. Writing in the Los Angeles Examiner on 23 May 1955 she said:

"British scientists and airmen, after examining the wreckage of one mysterious flying ship, are convinced these strange aerial objects are not optical illusions or Soviet inventions, but are flying saucers which originate on another planet. The source of my information is a British official of cabinet rank who prefers to remain unidentified."

Writing in Flying Saucer Review (Volume 25, Number 4 and Volume 31, Number 1) Gordon Creighton, who had researched this story in detail, made it clear that he believed Kilgallen's source was Earl Mountbatten of Burma. Indeed, it has been suggested that Kilgallen picked the story up at a cocktail party hosted by Mountbatten in May 1955. Kilgallen's story has widely been dismissed as a hoax, but as we shall see, other events may put her claims in a new light.

Ghost Rockets

Ghost Rockets

In the immediate aftermath of the Second World War a new mystery was to emerge, which again involved R. V. Jones. This was the so-called "Ghost Rocket" wave of sightings that occurred in Scandinavia in 1946. In chapter 52 of Most Secret War Jones is as dismissive of these sightings as he had been about Foo Fighters, believing them to be either "imaginary" or meteors. But a number of personnel working in Air Technical Intelligence believed these were sightings of Russian "flying bombs" and investigated the matter thoroughly. Jones reveals how the Swedish authorities recovered what they believed were pieces that had fallen from a Ghost Rocket. These fragments were subsequently acquired by Air Technical Intelligence staff and sent to the Chemical Analysis Section at the Royal Aircraft Establishment at Farnborough. It transpired that an embarrassing mistake had been made and the fragments were nothing more than pieces of coke, but the story is interesting in what it reveals about official interest in these sightings and the way in which British scientific intelligence experts were able to acquire the material from a neutral country.

The Westerham Incident

Chapter 52 of R. V. Jones' book Most Secret War contains a truly bizarre anecdote concerning the alleged crash of an object at Westerham in Kent, in 1946. Apparently a signal was received from General MacArthur's staff in Tokyo, asking for confirmation of a report that a Russian flying bomb had recently crashed in England. The other Director of Intelligence on the Air Staff, Air Commodore Vintras, suggested to Jones that this might tie in with the "Westerham Incident".

The Westerham Incident started, apparently, with an irate call to the Technical Intelligence Staff from a farmer called Gunyon who wanted the Air Ministry to come and remove one of these "darned contraptions" which had fallen onto his farm. The intelligence officers asked for directions and were told to drive from Croydon to Westerham, turning onto a lane when they reached a pub called The White Dog. Amidst great security, two staff cars were dispatched, but failed to find the farm. They located a pub called The White Hart and a farmer named Bunyan, who strenuously denied having made the call. This bizarre incident remains unexplained and although it appeared to be a hoax, few people would have had the wherewithal to get through to the Technical Intelligence Staff and convince them to make a field visit. Indeed, the intelligence officers believed that Jones himself had been behind the affair.

Is there a link between the Westerham Incident, General MacArthur's enquiry about a crashed Russian flying bomb and Dorothy Kilgallen's story? Could these be references to the same incident? Was it really a hoax? If so, it was one that went to the very heart of the British Establishment. As a final footnote, perhaps it is worth noting that Westerham is just a couple of miles from Chartwell, which was the home of Sir Winston Churchill.

Media Interest

We should never underestimate the power of the media, or its capability to set the political agenda, even to the extent that it can drive government policy. This is as true today as it was in the post-war years. The year that ufology first really hit the headlines in the UK was 1950. Prior to that there had, of course, been coverage, but this largely concerned US sightings and the reporting was often dismissive. But on 8 October 1950 two major newspapers started a series of articles on the subject. The Sunday Express began to serialise Gerald Heard's book The Riddle of the Flying Saucers (The book was subsequently published in the US under the title Is Another World Watching?). The rival Sunday Dispatch, a London paper, ran extracts from Frank Scully's Behind the Flying Saucers and Donald Keyhoe's The Flying Saucers are Real.

But it was not just the media who were clamouring for answers and pressing the Government for action. Some very senior Establishment figures felt that something should be done and lobbied on the subject, sometimes openly and sometimes behind the scenes. Some of these figures were quite prepared to express openly the view that some UFO sightings might well be extraterrestrial in origin.

Earl Mountbatten of Burma

One senior Establishment figure who took an active role in this subject was Earl Mountbatten, whose interest is well known to most ufologists and has been widely documented, not least in Philip Ziegler's 1985 book Mountbatten: The Official Biography. In chapter four of his book Flying Saucers and Common Sense, published in 1955, Waveney Girvan reveals that Earl Mountbatten had written a personal letter to the editor of the Sunday Dispatch early in 1950. This letter followed an earlier article concerning a wave of UFO sightings in America, in the town of Orangeburg. The letter read as follows:

"These extraordinary things have now been seen in almost every part of the world - Scandinavia, North America, South America, Central Europe, etc. Reports are always appearing and the newspapers generally try to ridicule them. As a result it is difficult for any seriously interested person to find out very much about them. I should therefore like to congratulate you on having had both the intelligence (and, incidentally, the courage) to print the first serious helpful article which I have read on the Flying Saucers. I have read most other accounts up to date, and can candidly say yours interested me the most".

Girvan goes on to reveal that Mountbatten and the editor of the Sunday Dispatch had a lengthy conversation about UFOs in mid 1950, which led directly to the serialisation of Scully and Keyhoe's books, as mentioned previously.

It is also well known among ufologists that on 23 February 1955 it is alleged that a UFO was sighted at Mountbatten's estate at Broadlands in Hampshire. The witness was Frederick Briggs, a bricklayer employed at Broadlands. Briggs said that the craft had been shaped like a spinning top, was metallic and about 20 or 30 feet in diameter with portholes around the centre. Watching from a distance of less than 100 yards, Briggs estimated that the craft was 80 feet above the ground. Briggs saw a humanoid figure dressed in what looked like overalls and a helmet descend from the craft on some sort of column with a platform at the bottom. He was then dazzled by a bright blue light from the craft and fell over, where he lay unable to move, as if held by a strange force. The craft then flew off at high speed.

Mountbatten took a personal interest in this incident, interviewed Briggs and searched the area of the meadow over which the UFO had been seen. He subsequently had a statement prepared, detailing Briggs' claims. This story was written-up by Desmond Leslie in 1980, in Flying Saucer Review (Volume 26, Number 5). Mountbatten's signed statement on the incident is held with many of his other private papers, at the Broadlands Archive.

Lord Dowding

Another senior Establishment figure whose interest and belief in UFOs is widely known and documented is the wartime Commander-in-Chief of Fighter Command, Air Chief Marshal Sir Hugh Dowding. He was as outspoken as Mountbatten on the issue. Writing in the Sunday Dispatch on 11 July 1954 he said:

"I am convinced that these objects do exist and that they are not manufactured by any nation on Earth. I can therefore see no alternative to accepting the theory that they come from some extraterrestrial source."

We have learned from veteran British ufologist Emily Crewe that when contactee George Adamski visited the UK in 1963, Dowding and Mountbatten met him in London and subsequently took him to Broadlands to see the site of Frederick Briggs' 1955 UFO sighting.

"The Chairman said that Sir Henry Tizard felt that reports of flying saucers ought not to be dismissed without some investigation..."
NAVY

Sir Peter Horsley

Sir Peter Horsley, who died on 20 December 2001, was a former Air Marshal whose distinguished RAF career saw him retire as Deputy Commander-in-Chief at HQ Strike Command. A chapter of his 1997 autobiography Sounds From Another Room relates to his interest in UFOs and the interest of friends and colleagues such as Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Barratt, General Sir Frederick Browning and General Martin. While serving as a Royal equerry in 1952, Horsley began a study into the UFO phenomenon, with the full knowledge of the Duke of Edinburgh, who was briefed on Horsley's findings. Horsley has said that the Duke of Edinburgh was interested and open-minded on the subject, though keen that Horsley's inquiry should be low-key.

Sir Henry Tizard

An Establishment figure whose interest in UFOs is less well known is Sir Henry Tizard. Tizard is best known for his pioneering work on the development of radar technology prior to the Second World War and his various wartime posts included Scientific Adviser to the Air Staff. He returned to the Ministry of Defence in 1948 as Chief Scientific Adviser, a post that he held until 1952.

Although largely outside the scope of this article, it is perhaps interesting to note that although Sir Henry Tizard and Lord Cherwell had once been friends, a series of disagreements over various policy issues had ended their friendship and turned them into great rivals. We do not say that this had any direct bearing on the subsequent handling of the UFO issue, but their differing opinions on the subject should perhaps at least be viewed in the context of their rivalry. It was Cherwell who had the last word on Churchill's 1952 enquiry on UFOs, telling the Prime Minister that he agreed entirely with the Secretary of State for Air's sceptical views. When it comes to UFOs, the believer versus sceptic debate is as active within government and the military as anywhere else, as is clear from the books of those people (e.g. Ruppelt and Hynek) who have been involved in official government UFO research and investigation programmes.

Tizard had followed the official debate about ghost rockets with interest and was intrigued by the increasing media coverage of UFO sightings in the UK, America and other parts of the world. Using his authority as Chief Scientific Adviser at the MOD he decided that the subject should not be dismissed without some proper, official investigation. Accordingly, he agreed that a small Directorate of Scientific Intelligence/ Joint Technical Intelligence Committee (DSI/ JTIC) working party should be set up to investigate the phenomenon. This was dubbed the Flying Saucer Working Party. The DSI/JTIC minutes recording this historic development read as follows:

"The Chairman said that Sir Henry Tizard felt that reports of flying saucers ought not to be dismissed without some investigation and he had, therefore, agreed that a small DSI/JTIC Working Party should be set up under the chairmanship of Mr Turney to investigate future reports.

After discussion it was agreed that the membership of the Working Party should comprise representatives of DSI1, ADNI(Tech), MI10 and ADI(Tech). It was also agreed that it would probably be necessary at some time to consult the Meteorological Department and ORS Fighter Command but that these two bodies should not at present be asked to nominate representatives".

The Flying Saucer Working Party

The Flying Saucer Working Party was set up in October 1950, but operated under such secrecy that its existence was known to very few. Nevertheless, there were two clues that such a study had been carried out. One of these clues was obvious, but the other was more obscure.

The first clue was in the Secretary of State for Air's response to Prime Minister Winston Churchill's famous 28 July 1952 memo in which he enquired "What does all this stuff about flying saucers amount to? What can it mean? What is the truth? Let me have a report at your convenience". The response, dated 9 August 1952, began "The various reports about unidentified flying objects, described by the Press as "flying saucers", were the subject of a full Intelligence study in 1951".

The second clue was in a minute dated 29 May 1959, written by an official in S6 (a now defunct MOD division whose responsibilities for researching and investigating UFOs were latterly taken on by DS8, Sec(AS) and now DAS). This minute contained a sentence which read "The subject was reviewed by the J.I.C. some years ago and their views agree with a more extensive review carried out by the Americans". This minute can be found at the PRO in file DEFE 31/118.

There was some considerable discussion and debate about the terms of reference of the Flying Saucer Working Party. The final version read as follows:

1. To review the available evidence in reports of "Flying Saucers".
2. To examine from now on the evidence on which reports of British origin of phenomena attributed to "Flying Saucers" are based.
3. To report to DSI/JTIC as necessary.
4. To keep in touch with American occurrences and evaluation of such.

The five man working party was chaired by Mr G. L. Turney from one of the MOD's scientific intelligence branches. All the members were specialists in the field of scientific and technical intelligence. One member, Wing Commander M. Formby, Assistant Director of Intelligence (Technical) at the Air Ministry, also chaired the Guided Missiles Working Party.

The working party's conclusions were set out in a document dated June 1951 and bearing the designation DSI/JTIC Report No. 7. It was entitled "Unidentified Flying Objects" and classified "Secret Discreet". The report comprises six pages (including the cover sheet) and is reproduced here, in full. We obtained it last year under the Code of Practice on Access to Government Information (as did a number of other researchers) and it was subsequently made available at the Public Record Office on 1 January 2002. Some of the key PRO file references containing the Report and related DSI/JTIC discussions are DEFE 10/496, DEFE 41/74 and DEFE 41/75.

As the report is reproduced here, in full (aside from some material in paragraph 4, relating to liaison with the Americans, which has been withheld) we do not propose to do much more than give a brief summary of the document, as we believe it speaks for itself. The following commentary should be viewed in conjunction with Graham Birdsall's analysis in the January 2002 issue of UFO Magazine.

Commentary on DSI/JTIC Report No 7

The report begins with a history of the UFO phenomenon, covering the Scandinavian "Ghost Rocket" wave of 1946, Kenneth Arnold's sighting, the death of Captain Thomas Mantell and the work of Projects Sign and Grudge. Curiously, Foo Fighters were not mentioned at all. Through our study of various DSI/JTIC minutes it seems that this oversight occurred because while Fighter Command were invited to submit views to the Flying Saucer Working Party, Bomber Command were not.

Roswell is not mentioned, although there is reference to a report of a "crashed flying saucer full of the remains of very small beings". But the Report states that the author of these claims had admitted that it had been a fabrication and it is clear that this is a reference not to Roswell but to Frank Scully's claims about the recovery of a UFO at Aztec, New Mexico, in 1948.

The report then details some British UFO sightings, concentrating on three cases involving military witnesses. But in each case, the sightings are dismissed as either optical illusions or misidentifications of ordinary aircraft or meteorological balloons. One visual sighting from a pilot had apparently been correlated by radar, but this was attributed to interference from another radar system.

The report concludes that all UFO sightings could be explained as misidentifications of ordinary objects or phenomena, optical illusions, psychological delusions or hoaxes. The main body of the report ends with the following statement:

"We accordingly recommend very strongly that no further investigation of reported mysterious aerial phenomena be undertaken, unless and until some material evidence becomes available".

The report was duly considered by the DSI/JTIC and Mr Turney recommended that in view of the its sceptical conclusions, it should be regarded as a final report. He further suggested that the working party be dissolved with immediate effect. This was agreed by the meeting, thus bringing to an end the MOD's first UFO research project. The DSI/JTIC minutes of the meeting that agreed to dissolve the working party contain the following telling quote, recording Mr Turney's views:

"He went on to say, that following the lead given by the Americans on this subject, the Report should he thought, have as little publicity as possible and outside circulation should be confined to one copy to Sir Henry Tizard".

We should point out that in this context the terms "publicity" and "outside circulation" refer to publicity and distribution of the report within the MOD. There was certainly no question of informing the public.

The American Influence

In looking at the activities of the Flying Saucer Working Party one cannot overstate the influence of the Americans. The phrase "following the lead given by the Americans on this subject" which we quote in the previous paragraph is extremely revealing and it is clear from the report itself that much of the material comes from liaison with those involved with Projects Sign and Grudge. There are other clues. As we have said, R. V. Jones forged extremely close links with the Americans on a range of intelligence issues and it is interesting to note that the fourth item of the Flying Saucer Working Party's terms of reference (requiring them to liaise with US authorities) was a late - though undoubtedly sensible - addition to the original remit.

Once the terms of reference included a requirement to get alongside the Americans on the UFO question, active liaison began. A member of the Flying Saucer Working Party duly travelled to America to meet with US authorities. It is also known that H. Marshall Chadwell was consulted and sat in on at least one of the Flying Saucer Working Party's meetings.

Chadwell was Assistant Director of the CIA's Office of Scientific Intelligence and in 1952 and 1953 was one of the key figures in the Scientific Panel on UFOs, better known as the Robertson Panel, after its chairman H. P. Robertson, an eminent physicist from the California Institute of Technology.

Robertson had been President Eisenhower's Scientific Adviser during the war, holding the rank of a four-star General. He had worked closely with R. V. Jones on various scientific intelligence matters and moved seamlessly between government service and academia. His post-war appointments included a post as theoretical physicist in Pasadena, associated with the Mount Wilson and Mount Palomar Observatories, and a spell as head of the Weapons Systems Evaluation Group at the Pentagon.

The Robertson Panel's sceptical report concluded that further study of the UFO phenomenon was not warranted, though as CIA Chief Historian Gerald Haines has confirmed, the CIA did not abandon their interest in the phenomenon.
It is also interesting to note what Edward Ruppelt (former head of the USAF's Project Blue Book) says about the British UFO research effort. Writing in his 1956 book The Report on Unidentified Flying Objects he makes a number of specific references to the UK.

In chapter 3 he states that the 1948 document Estimate of the Situation (prepared by staff on the USAF's Project Sign, initially classified Top Secret and concluding that some UFOs were extraterrestrial) mentioned

NICK POPE The man who left the MOD, the ufo phenomena unveiled. Nick Pope worked for the British Ministry of Defence for twenty one years. He became known as the Fox Mulder of Great Britain due to his 'special position' as the chief UFO investigator.

He has written four highly successful books on UFO's and has appeared on television and radio all over the world. In fact, Nick Pope is probably one of the best known UFO investigators on the planet. And yet, he is the only official UFO investigator employed by the British government to ever go on record.
In this documentary Nick Pope for the first time since leaving the MOD goes on the record and spells out his beliefs, opinions and reveals the scope of his incredible insider knowledge.

that "Ghost Aeroplanes" had been detected on British radar early in 1947.

In chapter 10 there is a sentence that reads as follows:
"Two RAF intelligence officers who were in the US on a classified mission brought six single-spaced typed pages of questions they and their friends wanted answered".
Chapter 14 mentions the September 1952 UFO sightings during Operation Mainbrace (including the sightings at RAF Topcliffe). Ruppelt comments:
"It was these sightings, I was told by an RAF exchange intelligence officer in the Pentagon, that caused the RAF to officially recognise the UFO".

In chapter 17 Ruppelt reveals that even after he had left Project Blue Book and the USAF, friends in RAF intelligence kept him informed about latest developments, on a private basis.

Another indication of the strong US influence on the Flying Saucer Working Party is the fact that their June 1951 final report was entitled Unidentified Flying Objects. This term had been devised by Ruppelt himself, early in 1951, but was not at the time in use outside US Government circles.

To put the above remarks about US influence into context, it is worth noting the extent to which Britain was in thrall to America more generally by the early Fifties. This process had started during the Second World War with the Lend-Lease Bill, the terms of which had contributed to the decline of British power and influence. By the end of the war it was clear that in a very real sense the British Empire had been supplanted by an American one. In intelligence matters too, the historic position had been reversed and in post-war years Britain was very much the junior partner to the US.

Revenge of the Saucers

The Flying Saucer Working Party had been dissolved in 1951 amidst a frenzy of scepticism that had clearly been fuelled by the Americans. The response that Churchill received to his 1952 enquiry showed that the sceptics still had the upper hand within the MOD. But this was soon to change. During the period 1952 to 1957 there were a series of UFO sightings involving the military, which forced the MOD to rethink and then reverse its policy. These included sightings during Operation Mainbrace in September 1952 (including those at RAF Topcliffe), the West Malling incident on 3 November 1953, Flight Lieutenant Salandin's near-collision with a UFO on 14 October 1954, the Lakenheath/Bentwaters radar/visual sightings on 13 and 14 August 1956 and the RAF West Freugh incident on 4 April 1957.

High-profile sightings such as these, together with the increasing number of reports from the general public, pushed the sceptics within MOD onto the defensive. The Flying Saucer Working Party's recommendation that UFO sightings should not be investigated was overturned and by the mid-Fifties two Air Ministry Divisions were actively involved in investigating UFO sightings. The divisions concerned were S6, a civilian secretariat division on the air staff, and DDI(Tech), a technical intelligence division. Their brief was to research and investigate the UFO phenomenon looking for evidence of any threat to the UK.

Conclusion

This article gives what we believe is the most comprehensive overview yet written concerning the early years of official British interest in UFOs. We hope that the information and references will encourage other researchers to follow some of the leads given here.

Some time in the future, it may be that the MOD writes an Official History of its involvement in the UFO issue, in much the same way as such accounts are produced on major events such as the Falklands Conflict or the Gulf War. If and when such an Official History is written, it will doubtless cover much of the material in this article, as well as more recent events such as the Rendlesham Forest incident.
But any Official History must also focus on the personalities involved in official research and investigation into UFOs. In looking at the story told in this article it is clear that the same names crop up repeatedly and that there are some intriguing links between some of these key players. It is also intriguing to see the way in which the sceptic versus believer debate about the extraterrestrial hypothesis has been conducted at the very highest levels of government and military. This is as much a part of the story as the incidents themselves.

Will Reality of Extraterrestrial Life Shatter Religion?

by John Milor

John Milor is an author of several books, and radio talk show guest for numerous programs, including the Art Bell show. His interest in understanding paranormal phenomenon began at the age of five after hearing his great grandmother's tale of seeing a UFO hovering over the plains of Kentucky during broad daylight, shortly following the turn of the century. This story, as well as numerous otherworldly encounters of his own, fueled his quest of the unknown. His life literally became an episode of the X-Files on a number of occasions, until he reached the age of twenty one, and was visited by none other than Jesus Christ, in a vision. Since that time, Milor has become a born again Christian, yet continues to investigate paranormal phenomenon, now with a Bible in one hand,r and research documentation in the other hand. John has earned two Associates degrees and a Bachelor degree in Business, and works as a Master Sergeant in the Air National Guard. He lives with his family in Fresno, California. All are invited to visit his website to read all his books; they are posted online in their entirety for free reading: http://www.AliensAndTheAntichrist.com. Milor operates a MySpace website @ www.MySpace.com/johnmilor, and welcomes emails as well: jmilor@yahoo.com.

In the words of physicist and author Paul Davies, "The existence of extraterrestrial intelligences would have a profound impact on religion, shattering completely the traditional perspective of God's special relationship with man. The difficulties are particularly acute for Christianity, which postulates that Jesus Christ was God incarnate whose mission was to provide salvation for man on Earth. The prospect of a host of 'alien Christs' systematically visiting every inhabited planet in the physical form of the local creatures has a rather absurd aspect."[1]

Most Christians don't give much thought to the existence of extraterrestrial life, and if pressed for an answer, they usually either deny their existence, or suggest that there is an underlying deception that links them with fallen angels. According to Tariq Malik, staff writer for Space.com, a telephone poll, which questioned one thousand Americans, revealed that regular churchgoers were less likely to believe in extraterrestrial life (about 46 percent) than non-churchgoers (about 70 percent) …"[2]

Additionally, in May of 2005, a survey conducted by the National Institute for Discovery Science was given to pastors, priests, and rabbis across the United States, asking basic questions relating to extraterrestrial life.[3] Out of all of the comments posted in the survey, not a single one formed the basic conclusion that angels, by definition, are intelligent beings whose origins are not from Earth. All of these people have been reading and studying the Bible most of their lives, and couldn't see the basic fact that one of the primary themes of the Bible is God's intervention in the affairs of humanity through extraterrestrial beings.

Furthermore, of the 42 percent that gave positive responses, most of them had theological questions they thought might be a struggle to deal with, reminiscent of Paul Davies statement above. My question is, WHY?

According to the Bible, God picked Earth to initiate his great plan of attack against Satan and to save all the casualties of sin who want to be saved. To do this, God undertook a two-part mission, which is still in progress: come to Earth in the form of a human being (Jesus) and die for everyone's sins—then after conquering death, ensure the spreading of the Gospel of repentance and salvation.

Concerning the first part of his mission, scripture states that Jesus suffered death on the cross once and for all (Hebrews 10:10).[4] I personally see no reason he should have to suffer a similar fate anywhere else. Why would Jesus' dealing with sin and death be any different as another species on another planet? God defines sin and death with absolute definitions that pertain to all life. Therefore the cross is sufficient for all of it, even if it extends into the cosmos.

Hebrews 10:10 (bold emphasis added)

> By thee which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.

Concerning the second part of Jesus' mission, Hebrews 2:16–18 indicates that salvation is not for angels, but for the descendants of Abraham.

Hebrews 2:16–18 (bold emphasis added)

> For verily He took not on him the nature of angels; but He took on him the seed of Abraham. Wherefore in all things it behooved Him to be made like unto His brethren, that He might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people. For in that He Himself hath suffered being tempted, He is able to succor them that are tempted.

Does this confine salvation to the inhabitants of Earth? The true descendants of Abraham are not defined as biological descendants. This definition, based on one's DNA rather than the grace of God, would disqualify a large, faithful portion of even the human race; rather, the descendants of Abraham are those who belong to Christ (Galatians 3:26–29).

Galatians 3:26–29 (bold emphasis added)

> For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise.

No word is mentioned about what species they are, or what planet or dimension they come from. Scripture only states that salvation is not for the angels, and even that statement is somewhat vague. What defines an angel? Better yet, who defines an angel?

Jesus defined angels as beings who neither marry nor are given in marriage. He also said that humans who are saved would one day be translated into this new nature (Matthew 22:30; Mark 12:25; Luke 20:35; Revelation 21:16–17; 22:8–9).

Matthew 22:30 (bold emphasis added)

> For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven.

Mark 12:25 (bold emphasis added)

> For when they shall rise from the dead, they neither marry, nor are given in marriage; but are as the angels which are in heaven.

Luke 20:35–36 (bold emphasis added)

> But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage: Neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection.

Revelation 22:8–9 is a primary example of this glorified state, where scripture refers to a glorified saint (a man, one of the brethren) as being an angel (this is most clearly seen in the King James Version of the Bible).

Considering these details, one may easily deduce from the Bible that the angels weren't always angels. They were most likely like us: created to reproduce after their own kind, just as Adam and Eve were until they reached a certain point in their existence where God predetermined to translate them into a new, higher level of existence. This theory explains a great deal about some of the behavior of angels, such as the fact that they are apparently physically attracted to humans (Genesis 6). Such attraction would be a very odd thing if reproduction were completely foreign to them.

According to the Bible, Adam and Eve were never angels, because they sexually reproduced. If Adam and Eve had never sinned, Earth would've eventually become fully populated. What then? One might postulate that the next level of existence for humanity would have then commenced. At the proper time, God would have translated different people at different times into a new, nonreproductive nature, as the Bible states that he still plans to do, despite the fall. One might also surmise that that this is how God designed most, if not all, higher life-forms created in his image. Initially there is a reproductive stage, but then a translation takes place that mutates beings into an eternally glorified existence that no longer entails reproduction. In a sense, we are like butterflies—designed to go through a metamorphosis. This is where humanity has come from, where it is going, and—from what it looks like—where the angels, both faithful and fallen, have been. In essence to be an angel is to be translated by God into the highest form of existence, rather than to be made into an angel fresh from the start, as most Bible students think for some strange reason.

Putting all this together, it stands to reason that salvation may not be for the angels because they are closer to God than any other being, and they have the highest level of accountability. There are probably countless numbers who aren't angels, however, who aren't from Earth or our current dimension. If they are in the same boat as the humans of Earth, then why aren't they candidates for salvation as well? What would Paul Davies say to this?

I personally believe that the second part of Jesus' mission spans even beyond Earth (Acts 2:39; Colossians 1:20; Ephesians 3:10), and Jesus may have been referring to this mission field when he spoke of reaching sheep from another fold (John 10:16).

Acts 2:39 (bold emphasis added)

> For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the LORD our God shall call.

Colossians 1:20 (bold emphasis added)

> And, having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself; by him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven.

Ephesians 3:10–11 (bold emphasis added)

> To the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the church the manifold wisdom of God, According to the eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord …

John 10:16 (bold emphasis added)

> And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

The eternal purpose of God accomplished through Jesus Christ takes on new meaning when we read Acts 2:39, Colossians 1:20, and Ephesians 3:10 with this perspective. Without understanding how salvation extends beyond Earth, it's difficult to interpret Colossians 1:20, which states that there is life in the heavens that requires reconciliation with God.

The few Christians who write about extraterrestrials usually link them with the Antichrist, myself included (my latest book is Aliens and the Antichrist), however, there is another side to this coin. While I believe fallen angels are indeed extraterrestrials, I also believe that faithful angels are extraterrestrials as well. All angels are extraterrestrials, but not all extraterrestrials are angels (because the definition of angels is more stringent than the definition for extraterrestrials). There are other beings in the heavens that the Bible speaks of that might be just like us; beings cursed with mortality, and in dire need of salvation, as suggested by Colossians 1:20.

In relation to the topic of cosmic salvation, I have discovered that Israel in particular stands alone for both the quantity and variety of UFO and alien-related phenomena.[5] Sightings of UFOs in Israel include every size and shape, and aliens range from humans to grays to giants and everything else imaginable. These sightings are sometimes reported not by a few people, but by hundreds of people in mass sightings. Barry Chamish, Israel's leading UFOlogist, (who emailed me just the other day), has documented a large number of UFO incidents that have occurred in a UFO wave engulfing Israel beginning in 1993.[6] In Barry's book, Return of the Giants, Barry describes one such incident that occurred in 1996 that had the government up in arms, thinking they were being invaded by high-tech terrorists. The reported incident included a large gathering of police officers and military personnel that actually fired everything they had, including shoulder-harnessed anti-aircraft missiles, at a UFO hovering about one hundred fifty feet above the ground. The UFO just sat there for over two hours, unaffected, then disappeared.[7]

I suspect the reasoning behind the quantity and uniqueness of UFO and alien-related phenomenon in Israel comes from the fact that UFO and alien-related phenomenon always has proliferated the region, dating back to biblical times. Israel is a focal point not only for the inhabitants of the Earth, but even for the entire universe. Concerning beings who are faithful to God, or they are seeking him out, they are here to either help us (Hebrews 1:14) or learn from us (1 Peter 1:12; Ephesians 3:10; 1 Corinthians 4:9). They're searching in Israel for more information about salvation (this is especially the case with those who are mortal like us, searching for a hope of salvation). It could even be that angels are giving tours of Israel to visitors from elsewhere, both learning and teaching the Gospel and fulfilling their task of ministering to the heirs of salvation (Hebrews 1:14; Ephesians 3:10), whoever and wherever those heirs may be.

1 Peter 1:12 (bold emphasis added)

Unto whom it was revealed, that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things, which are now reported unto you by them that have preached the gospel unto you with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; which things the angels desire to look into.

1 Corinthians 4:9 (bold emphasis added)

For I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men. We are fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ; we are weak, but ye are strong; ye are honorable, but we are despised.

Indeed, there is more I have to say on this subject, but I will sum up this article with one simple statement; there is no reason for any Christian to conclude that the existence of extraterrestrial life pose any threat to one's faith. The mere existence of extraterrestrial life is not in conflict with the Bible, but rather complimented by it. # UFOs and Geography

By Nuclear Physicist Stanton T. Friedman, Jan.29, 2007

As a nuclear physicist who has lectured ( "Flying Saucers Are Real") in 18 countries, I have often found that there is considerable confusion about the terms solar system, galaxy, universe. A solar system is a central star with 1 or more planets in orbit around it. Ours is about 6 billion miles in diameter .. less than 10 light hours across. The next star over is 4.37 light years (LY) away. Many nearby stars have at least one planet. Our Galaxy, The Milky Way, is about 100,000 LY across and has a few hundred billion stars. The next big similar galaxy,a big flattened spiral pancake, is Andromeda about 2.5 million LY away. The universe includes all the galaxies and spaces between them. and is roughly 13 billion LY across and has billions of galaxies. The age of the solar system is roughly 5 billion years or very much greater than the age of our civilization.The universe is at least 13 billion years old

One of the silliest comments made about the recent O'Hare Airport sightings was a joke that aliens came 7 million light years to find their landing gate blocked and had to go home.. Talking about millions of light years is absurd when considering alien visitors. Much more useful is the concept of our local galactic neighborhood. Within only 55 LY are about 2000 stars, about 46 of which are very similar to the sun Based on what we know so far, these might be expected to have planets and possibly life.

Not all local neighborhood stars are as isolated as is the sun. Just 39.2 LY away there is a very special pair of sun-like stars Zeta 1 and Zeta 2 Reticuli in the Southern Sky constellation of Reticulum They are the closest to each other pair of sun-like stars in the neighborhood, being only 1/8th of a light year apart from each other. or 35 times closer to each other than the sun is from the nearest other star. From a planet around one, the other star is visible all day long. One could directly observe planets around the other star. No guessing.

There would be a much greater incentive for interstellar travel with such close neighbors. Considering that these two stars are a billion years older than the sun, one would expect any intelligent life on planets around either one to be much more advanced technologically than are we. It is true that SETI Specialist Dr. Seth Shostak claims they were listened to with radio telescopes 10 years ago and no signal was heard; ergo nobody home. He assumes, for no good reason at all, that they are stuck with the same technology we newbies have, that they would be directing a signal towards us and that there is no colonization, no migration and no travel here.He refuses to study the UFO data. This null result is not surprising. AM radios don't pick up FM signals. If my wife wants a loaf of bread for dinner, she won't put up with my saying. "I will be back next week from that fine bakery in Sidney, Australia". She would say "The Superstore is a mile away". Shostak thinks there may be another civilization sending us signals within 1000 light years. He assumes we are the crown of creation. I think we know as little about the outside neighborhood as gorillas in a nature preserve in Africa.

The work that delineated ZR 1 and Zr-2 was done by Ms. Marjorie Fish working with the star map drawn by social worker-abductee Betty Hill in the 1960s. It is described in detail in the new book "Captured: The Betty and Barney Hill UFO Experience" by Betty's niece Kathleen Marden and myself. Publisher this summer is Career Press. It will be listed on my website www.stantonfriedman.com .

Since the release of my book, (The UFO – Jesus Connection. Infinity Publishing © 2001), I have been the guest on several radio, television and webcast shows. Invariably, where there is the ability to call in, someone will call to tell me how blasphemous such a concept is. They hadn't read the book – just the title.

I had the honor of being interviewed on the Lou Gentile Show on February 6th, 2003 (http://www.lougentile.com/feb03.html ). A gentleman called to tell me how I must "read my Bible more." Another simply said, "I just want to say that the guy you're talking to is an idiot!" That was it. There was no debate. There was no imparting of his own wisdom. Just insult and run. I could only laugh. Fortunately, Lou is a gracious host who, after going to an unscheduled break, apologized for the behavior of his caller. I assured him that I expect some people to judge the book by its cover and not worry about it.

Truth be known, I don't really blame certain individuals for taking this posture. I must put blame squarely on social conditioning. Our worldview has been dictated to us by our parents, grandparents, teachers, priests, ministers and rabbis and enforced under penalty of hellfire. Is it any wonder that we are prepared to defend our personal believe system blindly and without prejudice? We often forget that, because of the very nature of a belief system, it cannot be proven by the believer nor disproved by the debunker.

To help stem the tide of pre-judgmental comments, I always preface an interview or lecture concerning this book with the following: "I am not saying that God and Jesus were nothing more than aliens in flying saucers. Far from it! What I am saying is, 'If Ezekiel's "wheel within a wheel" and Moses' "pillar of fire and cloud" were forerunners of today's UFOs, then the Star of Bethlehem and that brilliant cloud to which Jesus ascended must be treated in the same vein."

The book is divided into three sections. The first shows examples of anomalous aerial phenomena that was witnessed and reported in the Bible. The second addresses spiritual phenomena, e.g. near death experiences, out of body episodes, spirit communication etc. I have included several personal experiences to emphasis my personal acceptance of a spiritual God – the source of all things in the universe. And the third makes the connection between the two.

I was raised in a religious, church-going family and have come to accept Biblical scriptures as gospel. Then, when I was fourteen years old, a paradigm-shattering experience set me on a course that I have not veered from to this day. However, it has taken many years of adding two and two to arrive at the conclusion of which I now proclaim.

In the summer of 1962, I was fourteen years old. At about 11:00 P.M. one Saturday evening, I was going off to bed when something caught my attention out of the corner of my eye. I looked out the dark, open window to find a large patch of billowing smoke with seemingly bright green lights behind it in a cloudless, sky. I called to my parents to come and look. In a matter of seconds, my parents and older sister were on the front lawn of our Westside Detroit home gazing skyward.

It was dead quiet. Even the incessant chirping of the grasshoppers was absent. By this time the object was about two hundred feet directly above our house. It was no longer green but multicolored. The thick smoke was illuminated from the other side by huge electric lights. As the smoke began to clear above our heads, we could see giant round floodlights of yellow, red and white. I don't recall most of what was said between us but I do remember our commenting about the lack of any sound.

"Look!" My mother called. Off to our right, a pillar of smoke was descending slowly to the ground. It was as if a jet of air was forcing it down. "It's the Second Coming!" My mother declared.

We looked back up over our heads to find that the lights had receded. The smoke had been so thick that it made an outline of this silent craft impossible to discern. Yet the huge, round, colored lights had still shown through. As bright as those lights were, they never illuminated the ground where we stood directly below.

We continued to watch in silence as the smoke slowly dissipated, leaving only the cloudless, star-punctured sky. We returned to the safety of our house, unscathed. I do not remember talking at length with my family about the amazing "smoke and light show" we had just witnessed but it was over now and there was church to attend in the morning. We went to bed.

The following morning my father bought the Sunday morning Detroit Free Press to see if there was anything on this strange event. Sure enough, others had seen it. Some had reported it. We had not. The authorities wasted no time in handing us an explanation. They were the northern lights! With all the confusing technical jargon they could muster, a weak case was made for the northern lights making it all the way down to southern Michigan.

"Those weren't the northern lights," I argued. "I've seen them in pictures and in movies. Northern lights are ribbons of different colored lights that streak across the sky. And they don't have smoke with them either!"

"Well," my mother assured me, "if they say they were the northern lights, then that's what we must have seen."

It might be understandable that a fourteen-year-old boy from Detroit couldn't tell the northern lights from a sack of onions. My mother, however, was born and raised in northern Michigan. My father had spent two years in Alaska. They had seen the northern lights on more than one occasion. Yet my father had stared into the night sky in awe and apprehension. My mother was all set for the Judgment Day!

It was at that very instant that I realized that we were being lied to. Not us in particular. Not anyone who had witnessed the event and knew the difference. They were lying to those who did not see it. Whom would those people believe? The United States Government or us? They were the experts on the matter. The ones who are sworn to serve and protect. The ones who are paid with our tax dollars to tell us the truth about everything - especially what goes on in our air space.

claimed to have come to this planet to set moral standards for a primitive society and to tell us about the one true God of the spiritual realm. But mankind, in his ignorance, continued to revere the messengers of God as God himself.

These non-terrestrial visitors claimed to have created our race on this planet. The book of Genesis suggests that this claim is valid:

And God said, "Let 'us' make man in 'our' image, after 'our' likeness." (Genesis 1: 26.) Orthodox religions teach that God made man in "his" image, but the scriptures clearly use the plurals, "us" and "our." To whom was God speaking?

When people had spread all over the world and daughters were being born, some of the heavenly beings saw that these young women were beautiful, so they took the ones they liked. Then the Lord said, "I will not allow people to live forever; They are mortal. From now on they will live no longer that 120 years." In those days and even later, there were giants on the Earth who were descendants of human women and the heavenly beings. They were the great heroes and famous men of long ago. (Genesis 6: 1 4)

Numbers 13: 22, refers to a place called Hebron where the descendants of a race of giants called Anakim, lived. Actually, the Hebrew word that was translated to "giants," is "nephilum," which literally means, "those who came down." Even a text, discovered in the Dead Sea Scrolls, refers to "angels" interbreeding with human women. Whether this was accomplished through normal intercourse or via genetic engineering, the end result would be the same.

Surprisingly, this theory would not detract from the teachings of the Bible. We humans procreate yet we do not claim to be God. If we were to go out into space, find a primitive race and introduce our genetic makeup to theirs, the resulting hybrid would not make us God. Although they would, no doubt, regard us as such due to our comparatively miraculous entrance into their low-tech world. They could only relate what they witnessed and experienced within their limited scope of reference.

There are many examples throughout history where a more advanced race of earthbound humans from one island happened upon a more primitive race from another. Invariably, they were revered as "gods". Captain Cook's arrival in the Hawaiian Islands is one. The arrival of Christopher Columbus to the New World is another. In all such instances, the natives had felt that their island was "the world" and there was neither anyone nor anything beyond its borders.

In the past fifty years, our view of the universe has greatly expanded. We are now aware of the limitless regions of space where life might manifest and evolve. We also realize that our planet itself is nothing more than an island in outer space. Being forearmed with this knowledge, is it so outlandish to conclude that a more advanced civilization from another celestial island has come to this one in the past as we plan to do in the future? Wouldn't it be logical, indeed normal, to conclude that our forefathers would revere them as God, gods or angels of God just as some revere the occupants of today's UFOs as demons?

Yet, if this is the case, where does that leave the orthodox religions of the world? There are more than three thousand different orthodox religions. About twelve hundred of them are based on Christianity. All of them feel that theirs is the correct one. All of them know that not all can be correct at the same time. Would the acceptance of the Biblical/UFO hypothesis threaten them all? I would venture to say that such a hypothesis would verify, clarify, strengthen and unite them all. For once and for all, the world may come together in the understanding that all beings in God's vast cosmos are under the same umbrella. It has been widely reported by alien experiencers that, when asking of their captors, "is there a God?" The reply has been, "We are all of the same God."

It has become clear to me how our ancestors of thousands of years ago would invariably regard such a miraculous display as nothing short of divine intervention. The same parallel was unwittingly drawn by my mother, an unshakably devote Christian, in 1962. "It's the Second Coming!" She declared, as our family stood on our front lawn, one silent summer's night, and gazed in awe upon technology . . . millennia beyond our time. By David E. Twichell © 2003

"Communion" depicts the personal and professional crises a writer experiences after a series of encounters with non-human beings. This film is arguably the most intelligent film about the alien abduction/visitor phenomenon. Unlike countless made-for-TV films, where the emphasis is on the sensationalistic, "shocking" aspects of the subject, "Communion" focuses on the psychological and emotional harm the experience does. We see Strieber (Walken) describe his experiences to his medical doctor, and then to a psychiatrist. Once his own mental health has been established, then (and only then) does he begin to consider the possibility that the creatures he has seen are actually real. Features theme music performed by Eric Clapton! Starring: Christopher Walken, Lindsay Crouse. DVD $18.95

CLASH OF THE GENIUSES: INVENTING THE IMPOSSIBLE

Preceding every great advance in history, the geniuses of both the light and the dark have battled for the hearts and minds of the people. Despite the resistance of those committed to maintaining their own entrenched economic and political advantage, the seemingly outrageous impossibilities of one generation become the revolutionary breakthroughs of the next. In the 20th century, while Marconi, Henry Ford, Thomas Edison and George Westinghouse managed to capture most of the attention, others, with technological prowess bordering on the miraculous, have gone unnoticed. Men like Tesla, Moray, Riech, Russell and Schauberger, largely rejected, ridiculed and despised by the scientific establishment of their day, labored in nearly complete obscurity, achieving almost incomprehensible miracles like free energy, anti-gravity, transmutation of elements, physical rejuvenation technologies and more. Now, only a few decades later inventors, scientists and researchers of a new breed are making rapid, if yet unpublicized, strides toward unraveling the astonishing secrets of the unsung giants who came before them. Many of these new technological magicians find themselves on the threshold of breakthroughs still believed by many to be the stuff of hallucination. Join Atlantis Rising Magazine's editor J. Douglas Kenyon for a real look at incredible working technologies – some shown here for the very first time – that hold the promise of a far healthier, wealthier and happier world. 60 min • K529 • $24.95

WILHELM REICH: VIVA LITTLE MAN

Wilhelm Reich was a physician and scientist whose investigation of energy functions in human emotions led to the discovery of an unknown energy which exists in all living matter and in the cosmos. ## ALIENS FROM SPACESHIP EARTH

Hosted by Former Vietnam War Activist Rennie Davis and Folk Singer Donovan. While the "aliens" in this film seem to be quite human, one must realize that the film is dealing with close encounters of the fourth kind: an inner space journey triggered by the drug culture and rebellion of the sixties, and the non-violent search for self, evident in the seventies. Could this be due to some influence from a "higher spiritual consciousness"? The world's "alien" leaders are well represented in this film: Baba Muktananda, Swami Satchidananda, A. C. Bhaktivedanta, Guru Maharaj Ji, Yoga Bhahan, Sri Sathya Sai Baba, Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, Father Yod, Baba Ram Das, and well-known personalities who present their views on seeking their own individuality. Whether inspired by a more highly evolved race than earthlings, or from a visit millions of years ago by space aliens, "Aliens from Spaceship Earth" are causing great changes on our planet.

Once disease was blamed on evil spirits and the cure was to frighten the demons away. We have been told that what we call healing miracles are really natural events, misinterpreted by superstitious, primitive people. Today with all the knowledge of modern medicine, many still look to unorthodox means for achieving and maintaining physical and spiritual health. Some of these methods, often shocking, bizarre, and just downright amazing, are explored here as we meet the "Underground Doctors."
